

FIFTH AIR FORCE, KOREA . . . 1st Lt. Miles C. McDonnell, 5681 Guilford Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., receives the Distinguished Flying Cross from Lt. Gen. S. E. Anderson, Fifth Air Force commander, Lieutenant McDonnell's father, 501 Larchmont Drive, Birmingham, Mich. His wife, Jane, lives in Indianapolis. Lieutenant McDonnell distinguished himself on February 12, 1953, when on a visual reconnaissance of a main supply route between Pyongyang and Sinanju, Korea, he spotted a truck convoy. Although his radio compass had become inoperative, he continued on his mission and bombed the trucks, evaded searchlights, and returned to his home base safely.

Tonight Is Play's Second Performance

The second performance of Carl C. Womberger's adaptation of an English fairy tale "The Princess Who Was Forgotten" will make its appearance in the Greek Theatre at Cranbrook Thursday, July 30, with Joyce Harlan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Allen Harlan of Adams road, as the beautiful Princess Margaret who is rescued from her hardships by a number of comical and mischievous events.

Alice Shaw, head director for the Cranbrook Summer Theatre school's junior division, has directed two casts of 50 children, all under 14, in this three-act fantasy.

Miss Shaw, now a drama student at Northwestern University, herself was a junior in Cranbrook's Theatre project in the first eleven years with the organization, leaving Cranbrook one year to open her own Theatre School in Zanesville, Ohio.

INTRICATE COSTUMES for the production have been designed and executed by Annetta Womberger, with the assistance of Nancy Womberger, Barbara Aikens, Marcia McLintock and Alice Holmes.

A crew of Cranbrook senior students under Sara Strengell, director of make-up, and Robert Sprague, Richard Booth, Patricia Hogan, John Hawley and Jim August have taken charge of sets, properties and lighting.

Choreography by Marion Kirk includes an Egyptian ballet, and several sets of courtly dances.

"The Princess Who Was Forgotten" starts at 8 p.m.
