'Dream Boat' Completed After Two Years' Effort

THOMAS TELFER AND HIS CREATION, A CUSTOM BUILT HYDROPLANE. A dream come true after two years of planning. (Eccentric Staff Photo)

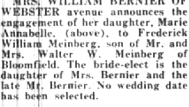

By G. K. HERMAN

Nineteen-year-old Thomas Telfer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert L. Telfer, 780 Greenwood, Birmingham, saw a dream of two years come true last week when he put the finishing touches on his own inboard speed boat.

Thomas got the idea of building a boat when two years ago he started working during summer vacations for Dun Arena at the famous speed boat builder's shop on the banks of the Clinton river in Mt. Clemens.

Picking up what information he could in his position at the shop and adding to it the suggestions and hints of Dun Arena, Thomas immediately began to lay plans for the boat that he would build for himself.

Boats cost a lot, so Thomas began to save his money. To gain experience, he undertook to build a boat for the son of a Detroit physician. This boat was successfully built two summers ago and was an outboard hydroplane.

DURING HIS Easter vacation from Culver Military academy this spring Thomas began the physical work of building his own craft.

It was going to be a custom made job and would require many special parts. So Thomas checked his blue prints and ordered those parts that would require considerable time to build. He also began the skeletal portion of his boat.

When he returned from graduation at Culver in June, he was all set to go. He worked at his summer job at the Arena boat shop, and in his spare time he built his boat.

Completed, it is a snappy inboard hydroplane of the 48 class. Powered with a twin carbureted Croseley engine, the boat develops 55 horsepower and will skim over the water at speeds up to 70 mph.

ACCORDING TO his father, Thomas has had an interest in machines that ply the waves since an early age and intends to pursue the science of boat building as a student in marine engineering at Stanford University where he will enroll this month.

Thomas was graduated as a lieutenant from Culver where he won honors in drill work and a letter in boxing.

Deny Rezoning On Bates Street

Birmingham city commissioners Monday night tended to agree with a plan board recommendation to deny a rezoning request from single family to income bungalow at 292 Bates.

Vida B. McEliff had petitioned for the change in zoning, explaining that the home adjacent to hers and a second home across the street were income properties.

In the plan board's recommendation to the commission, they stated that the neighborhood still was of a single family residence nature and that any such rezoning should
