Around the House

Hooked rugs are enjoying a new burst of popularity lately. This is easy to understand for they seem to be at home with any type of decoration, except, perhaps the most extreme modern. Cotton hooks will not last like the wool hooks, however, they are much less expensive—and to many of us—from necessity—this is most important. A "good" cotton hooked rug, if properly cared for, will give many years of service. A few points you may be interested in concerning the care of hooked rugs will be easy to remember and actually are mostly common sense. When moving a rug from one place to another, never drag it—roll it up and carry it. When transporting your rugs, never fold them—roll them over a tight roll of newspapers with the right side to the outside. The reason for this is that as you roll, the loops spread and give and there is no added strain to the burlap foundation. Never shake a hooked rug. Use a vacuum cleaner if the type hooked rug, if properly cared for, will give many years of service. Home-shampooing is believed by many hooked rug fanciers to be superior to commercial dry cleaning. Even with fairly hard wear, this should not have to be done too often.

There are any number of good rug cleaners on the market, some to be used with water and some without. Try several until you find the one for you. Under no condition should a cotton or a wool hooked rug be washed in a washing machine. To buy or sell a used automobile, read and use Eccentric Classified Ads.
