A HAPPY CHRISTMAS STORY

(still going on)

"Boss," said Blitz this morning over a steaming bowl of stewed snowballs. "I know it sounds silly but I think you Missed the ice-boat last week."

"Well, Blitz, that sounds progressive to say the least. What's the pitch?"

"Well, pardon my audacity, Sir, but people don't go in for long lists of the 'we have it' type. You've got to take one item at a time and slap on a little detail. Glamorize it—make it intriguing, irresistible."

"Hm! Well, hm!" said the Boss with a poor attempt at onomatopoeia. "Hm! Why don't you take a crack at it?"

"O.K., Boss. Here's the way I'd do it—Take these Quon-Quon Baskets for instance. They ain't—I mean isn't no ordinary baskets. They are made of rattan-core; the fibrous section of the rattan cane. The stuff grows in wet tropical jungles and therefore it is not affected by moisture. In fact these baskets will last longer if you moisten them once in a while to keep the rattan-core from becoming brittle and cracking. If they get out of shape once in a while like Vi, does you can wet them and mold them back into shape. You can wash them with soap and cold or hot water if they get soiled with a little peanut butter or stuffed egg. There are three sizes of plain picnic hamper, some with two holders for thermos bottles and a few for flowers. Quite snazzy."

"Say, Blitz, that is really red hot. I want to try it. Let's see, Oh, yeah. These Bar-B-Bowls at McE's are the cat's meow. They come in four styles from $2.95 to $7.95. The low one will work perfectly in the fireplace and all carry a three year 'Burn-out' guarantee. The two taller models have collapsible legs and when the venison (some people like beef, thank heavens) is done then the fire bowl and grid can be lifted right off the legs and set on the table on a hot plate. So you can charcoal grill your meat all winter right outside the kitchen door and bring it into the gloom dining salon. It's out of this world."

"Say, Boss, you're green—dark green. But your slang is a bit dated. However, I think you have made a nice adjustment."

"Thanks, Blitz. And you just reminded me of the adjustable trivet which handles pots and casseroles up to 19 inches across the bottom. It's a gun for aunts and mothers with a lot of deers—or cubs, as the case may be. Incidentally, Boss, Rudolph hasn't come across the ice-flow yet. I think that blamed buck bungled the Blenko baggage."
