UNWRITTEN LAWS

WATCH A PEDESTRIAN STEPPING FROM SHOULDER TO PAVEMENT

No self-respecting pedestrian, walking on the highway shoulder, would be dumb enough to step into a puddle of water when within one step there is the nice, dry pavement. With his mind on the puddle he may well forget that a car may be coming at 60.

A pedestrian on the loose on a high speed highway is always bad news for a motorist. And you can do it to slow down, prepare to dodge and try to "second guess" him.

For a motorist to fail to recognize any pedestrian ahead as a hazard is as foolish as a sea captain failing to take special precautions when he reaches shoal water or the fog begins to roll in.
