PLAY IT SAFE!
 Make Sure
 Controls
 Are Working

The term "automatic furnace" is one applied to those furnaces which are under mechanical supervision and are designed to maintain heat temperatures in homes or buildings within a few degrees differential of the desired temperature without manual control.
 Furnaces which use coal, oil, or gas for fuel, are in most cases the types that are supervised by this mechanical or electrical control.
 Over a period of years, or because they are relatively new and have not been properly adjusted, they will sooner or later be a breakdown in the operation and trouble will be experienced by the owner.
THIS TROUBLE may manifest itself either by a smoking furnace, a puff back or an explosion in the unit. Or, it may not respond or operate at all, particularly after summer months during which the unit has not been used.
 If one experiences this type of trouble with the furnace and is not familiar with the mechanical parts of the unit, help is needed from the gas company, oil service man or stoker company.
 If this help is not available immediately and there seems to be danger from the unit, the fire department should be called.
HOWEVER, before any calls are made, the heat thermostat on the first or second floor, in most cases first or ground floor, should be set down as low as possible or at least something under the normal temperature of the building.
 If the thermostat is left set at a temperature which calls for heat, the defective furnace may react violently in an attempt to operate.
 Therefore, if your furnace or heating unit does not function properly, Play It Safe! Set the thermostat down immediately and leave it there until help or service can be obtained.

Take pride in your work. Why pay out good money when you can do it yourself.

Build this wood-paneled room in your expansion attic . . . Save by doing it yourself!

PLANKWELD* makes it easy to build that extra room you need and want . . . even if you have never tried carpentry work before.
 You see, PLANKWELD is a beautiful, new, pre-finished Weldwood® Plywood—specially designed to permit easy installation. The panels are edge-grooved so that they fit into each other to form a neat lap joint. They are held firmly to the studs by simple, concealed metal clips. If you use them over an existing plaster wall, they need no framing or furring. All visible nailing is eliminated.
 Once the panels are up, you have nothing more to do except sit back and enjoy the natural beauty of these wood-paneled walls for years to come. The rich, lustrous, factory-applied finish will last indefinitely! In fact, like all Weldwood Plywood, PLANKWELD is guaranteed for the life of the building in which it is installed.
 Moderately priced, PLANKWELD is available in such beautiful woods as birch and oak. It comes in easy-to-handle panels 1/4" thick, 16 1/2" wide and 8' long.
 Look for the PLANKWELD ad appearing in full color in your favorite home magazine this month. And stop in to see our PLANKWELD on display. We'll be glad to explain how easily and inexpensively you can create that extra living space. *See U. S. Pat. Off. Plans applied for.
