Blaze

(Continued from Page One) and furniture and their work was hampered by mazes of hose lines running on the ground from nearly a dozen fire trucks.

FIREMEN equipped with oxygen tanks worked feverishly to enter the upper story and confine the blaze, but flames already seated in the large wooden structure and fanned by winds turned the top portion of the building into a holocaust.

Installation of a new well in the subdivision on the northeast corner of Square Lake and Woodward aided fire fighting.

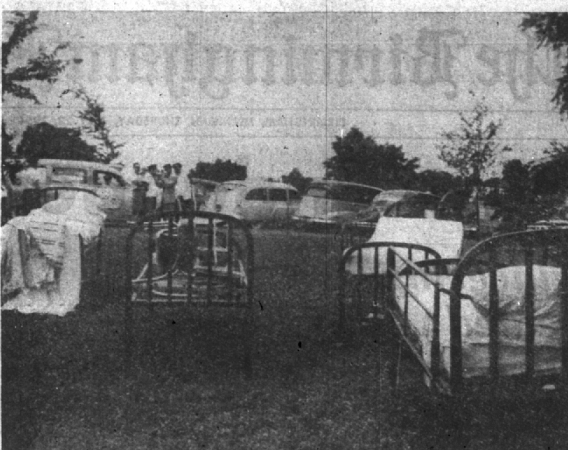

A hydrant serviced by the well was connected by Pontiac firemen who laid 1200 feet of hose to the hospital building and still gained enough water pressure to knock the blaze down.

Shortly before the well was placed in operation about three years ago, fire burned down Ted's Drive-In on the southeast corner of the intersection. Hydrants in the area then were useless to firemen because of lack of necessary pressure.

Under reciprocal fire protection agreements in operation among neighboring communities, a radio call for help and telephone calls to stations, not on Bloomfield's radio band brought quick help from other departments.

According to Bloomfield Supervisor David E. Anderson, Troy's department had trucks on the road before being called.

The Bloomfield Village department was placed on standby basis for the township as all township trucks responded to the call.

STILL SMOLDERING, the ralling from the roof of the right wing of Bloomfield hospital is pushed off by firemen in an effort to facilitate extinguishing the fire in the eaves and on the roof. (Eccentric Photo)

This & That

For months it was reported that England's Churchill favored admission of Red China to the United Nations. Then "Winnie" visited President Eisenhower in Washington for a few days, went back home and announced: "We are not yet ready to accept Red China in the UN."

Thus, you see, when a stubborn Englishman meets a stubborn American (when he is president) can win his argument for Ike is only voicing American sentiment when he opposes Red China becoming a member of the UN.

To Resume Hearing On Proposed Park

Tuesday the Birmingham Plan board will resume a hearing on the request that the commission acquire the property on the north side of Bowers for use as a park and recreational area. The commission is awaiting the board's final recommendation.

The proposal of a park and recreational spot was suggested by the residents in the area bound by Forest, Adams, Bowers and Elm.

Amendments Made In Zoning Code

BLOOMFIELD HILLS — City council at a special adjourned meeting Tuesday night adopted new zoning amendments which prohibit anything but singular family dwellings along a 400-foot strip along Woodward.

This action prevents possible future commercial and industrial development there.

The amended ordinance sets up four minimum-size lots for dwelling, ranging from 3/4 acre, 1 acre, 1 1/2 acres, to 2 acres, depending on the district.

Formerly lots could contain no less than 30,000 square feet. The changes do not affect the city's business district. However the number of families were reduced from not more than five families to not more than three families per acre.
