Distinguished Couple Live in Birmingham

By ALICE E. MORGAN

Among Birmingham's newer residents is a couple which has a most aristocratic background and a fascinating story to tell.

Pooney Siamese and his wife Wilhelmina, were known in their homeland, the Philippines, as "diplomats," for three generations of their ancestors had been associated with British and American embassies throughout the Orient.

Pooney and Wilhelmina met Mrs. Irene Murphy, whose home is on Bonnie Briar, when she was there last winter on a combination business trip and government assignment, and after due consideration, decided they would return with her to make their home "stateside." Mrs. Murphy explained for them that traveling cats face much the same problems as traveling humans. They must have all sorts of papers, examinations and certificates. A physical clearance is as necessary for them as for any person entering this country.

She added that the boat had covered many miles of the Pacific, and so the family finally settled in the Islands. Pooney and Wilhelmina had left Honolulu and was San Francisco-bound when the pursuer informed Pooney and Wilhelmina that their health had been declared ok, and they were now "free to leave the ship at any time."

"RIGHT IN THE middle of the Pacific he tells us," Pooney short-circuited. "Did he think we were seahorses?" Mrs. Murphy entered the interview seriously at this point, asking distinguished couple sharing her home.

She introduced their five children, much to Wilhelmina's distress. As fast as the youngsters were presented to this reporter, Wilhelmina ushered them about not wanting them to get any ideas of being "VIP."

The children safely back in their upstairs room, the sleek tan and dark brown couple, with their haunting blue eyes, settled down for the interview.

The group also turned in 150 polo pads, which is part of an annual project.

mischief they might be getting into. Being able to take a hint as well as the next one, this reporter thanked the couple politely for their time and trouble, did the same to Mrs. Murphy for all her help, and headed back for the office.
