Consider the Dismal Fate of Graduation Dresses Everywhere

By HELEN BRUNSON

After Graduation Week, some parents feel like they've

"commenced", themselves.

The feverish activity begins on a Thursday night two weeks before graduation, when Daughter comes home and says the girls are all having white dresses to wear under caps and course.

gowns.

Dad says for her to go down and buy a dress on Saturday, but after a day spent looking, she comes home saying there is no dress to fit her (out of the hundreds for sale), and she's bought white syelet material to make a dress.

Mother sighs. She remembers other dresses, and who made

BUT THAT DAY she spends shopping for white "heels". Sunday, church, a picnic, and baccalaureate: She is in a tizzy because a boy she likes has asked her to date. Graduation Week. Exercises are Thursday night. Monday, Mother sees the ungewed dress lying around and sews a few seams or it, though the rose bushes need spraying badly. That night Daughter sews for an hour bad has to rip out most of it. (She sews well ordinarily, but is dreaming of her date.)

Tuesday, Mother gets a few licks on the dress, but there's, the sews of the dress of the date of the dress of the date.

Tuesday, Mother gets a few licks on the dress, but there's, a labeline that afternoon. Maybe Daughter will sew after a club-picnic that afternoon. Maybe Daughter will sew after and Robert J. Keley, Jr., ring-bear.

After a Lolorado honeymoon, the trunans will live in Quever.

WEDNESDAY after school Daughter has to have her hair done: (Dad ignisted, because it's looked positively wooly laterly), so Mother manages to get the pockets with the dress and the bodice together. The material getting for mother. Later at right, Daughter sexys bodice to skirtly and puts in the zipper. But the bodice is on blackwards. Rip. Rip. Now both are too tired to sew and the dress is in a most discouraging state.

GRADUATION DAY. No school, so both get up and start to sew, ignoring hopsework. Mother resews bodice to skirt and puts in zipper. The skirt is measured, 12 inches from the foor.

Daughter sews on the seam binding and both work on the hem. It's noon, the dress is done, but too soiled to wear. Into the washer and out in 20 minutes. But it's raining and the dress won't dry. So wrap it in bath towds and at 4 p.m. mother irons it. It's present in bath towds and at 4 p.m. That night it's worn, forgotten and invisible under cap and gown. But daughten looks lovely and Mother and Dad are proud and thrilled.
