

Air Raid Alarm Will Find Bell Telephone Ready

An air raid protection system for its employees has been developed by the Michigan Bell Telephone company, described by Albert H. Wagner, local manager, as effective and simple.

Shelter areas, alarm systems, evacuation procedures, first aid, and fire and rescue squads have been set.

"As a result of careful planning," Warner commented, "our employees know exactly what to do in case of an air raid. They won't be running all over the building spreading panic and confusion and causing injuries that otherwise might be avoided."

BASIS OF Michigan Bell's plan is thorough organization, according to Warner. The appointment of Paul Westerby as building warden here was one of the first steps in setting up the local plan. Gordon DuFresne is alternate building warden. These men would double as floor wardens on the second floor of the local building.

Noel Wilkinson has been assigned first-floor warden duties with Mrs. Phyllis Titmus as alternate. A survey of all Bell buildings was made to determine the most effective shelter areas available. It was found, for example, that equipment rooms with their network of cables lashed to metal supports are made to order.

IN THE EVENT of an air raid, employees here would go to their assigned shelter areas and would take any customers who were in the building with them. There is a trained first aid squad to insure immediate attention for possible casualties.

A fire and rescue squad is ready with special tools, including acetylene torches, hydraulic jacks, heavy pinch bars, and other aids for extricating people trapped under falling debris. For fire fighting, they are also equipped with extinguishers, heavy asbestos gloves, water hoses, axes, and other tools.

First aid duties here would be carried out by James Wade, Mrs. Donna Hall and Miss Marge Kiehne.

The fire and rescue squad is made up of Bill Boehmer, Lyle Darst and Herbert Hitchcock.

Various groups in the building have been pre-advised and are frequently reminded as to the routes they should follow in seeking shelter.

Actual drills are held at infrequent intervals, although personnel dealing directly with the public do not participate.

Classes of instruction are given to the teams appointed for first aid, wardens, and rescue squads. Both initial and refresher courses are employed, said Warner.
