hand when the ships docked at New York and interviewed statesmen and travelers coming into the U. S.

On the European scene, Bennett recited the first real opposition to the then powerful Wellington Peel cabinet in England and prophesied its dissolution as the Whigs were shaping their first major victory over the Tories on the question of tithes from Ireland.

He reported the serious illness of the King of Prussia and commented on troubles between Russia and England. According to his report, the Russians halted a British war ship as it attempted to enter the Dardanelles.

Death of the Emperor of Austria placed Washington D. C. in mourning and spring style was said to mark the passing of the European ruler.

IN THE UNITED STATES the famed ship DeWitt-Clinton was plying the waters between New York City and Albany. The latest news story of the day was the burning of the steamship Advocate out of Albany and the rescue of many of its passengers by the DeWitt-Clinton.

Congress had adjourned and in Kentucky many day polities the Senators and other elected officials of the nation were back home to get the bushes for votes in the election.

"John C. Calhoun, Henry Clay and Daniel Webster were here recruiting their borders," according to Bennett. Mention also is made of the Kentucky stripping trees in Tennessee.

Bennett reported that the president's (Andrew Jackson) health was the weather—on any day it is good, the next it is bad."

REFERENCE is also made to Vice President Martin Van Buren and Attorney General Butler.

For a long way later to become the publisher of the New York Tribune, at this time was publishing the month's issues of The New Yorker.

The columns of the paper even included "satirical" chit-chat and Bennett, working as a drama critic, began to rise above the low eb of critics on other papers.

And there were other papers. Thirty-five dailies within the city of New York were attempting to outdo the city's population of 5,000,000. Of these, Bennett considered the Courier & Enquirer as the best of the daily and his own one-cent paper as tops in the small daily field.

Optimistic, Bennett guessed that his paper could reach a total circulation of 25,000 to 30,000. Little did he realize at that time just how many times these figures would be doubled throughout the nearly years of the paper's publication.

Mrs. Payne will contact the publishers of the New York Herald Tribune, the New York Times and the paper would like to add this new copy to its files as the Morning Star portion of the paper's merger celebrates its 110th birthday next Wednesday, May 26.

Hills Seniors Feted at Banquet

The Wardell Room of the Park Sheraton Hotel in Detroit was the spot chosen for the Bloomfield Hills High School Junior-Senior Banquet, Thursday, May 13. A roast duck dinner was served before the evening program.

After dinner Ralph Garlick, junior class president, welcomed guests and read results of a senior popularity poll.

Ted Watson, senior class president, spoke briefly, and seniors presented their advisors with gifts.

Mrs. Vera Grim, advisor on the Washington trip, was given a compact, and Stephen Vekoff, class advisor, was presented with an outboard motor.

Vekoff, Richard Spies, principal, and Eugene L. Johnson, superintendent, spoke for the faculty during the program. Nancy Rice gave the class prophecy. Teresa Sikorski read the will and Jack Allen, valedictorian, spoke on the future of today's students.

Case Edits Winning Industrial Paper

William K. Case, 1176 Smith, editor of the Burroughs corporation's "R" Line publication, was on hand last week to accept a certificate of merit awarded the publication at the International Council of Industrial Editors convention in Detroit.

This is the second consecutive year that the Burroughs corporation employee paper has been selected among the top ten publications in its field by the industrial editors.

The award was for "achievement of purpose, excellence of editorial content and effectiveness of design."

Emmett President Says 'Thank You', Lauds Birmingham

"...A city to be proud of" is what Edsel E. Dunn, village president of Emmett, Mich., had to say about Birmingham after his May 5 visit here in connection with the mayor exchange day week celebration, May 2-8.

He reported the serious illness of the King of Prussia and commented on troubles between Russia and England. According to his report, the Russians halted a British war ship as it attempted to enter the Dardanelles.

Death of the Emperor of Austria placed Washington D. C. in mourning and spring style was said to mark the passing of the European ruler.

Rivenoak Water Leak Costs City $15,000 Gal. A Day

A major water leak was discovered in the city last week in the city's continuing leak detection program.

Robert Kenning, department of public works head, estimated that a leak in the main in front of 915 Rivenoak was responsible for the loss of nearly 15,000 gallons of water a day.

Discovered by the water department's survey of the area, it was reported to the DPW and repaired by that department. Oddly enough, there was no indication at the surface of the ground that leak even existed in the line until sensitive equipment pin-pointed the leak.

Kenning added that some 12 minor water leaks have been detected among the top ten publications in its field by the industrial editors.

The award was for "achievement of purpose, excellence of editorial content and effectiveness of design."

Superintendent Outlines School Expansion Needs

"Plans have been carefully formulated to meet the present crisis in secondary schools caused by expanded enrollments of students," Dwight B. Ireland, superintendent of Birmingham schools, said this week.

In discussing a proposed $3,500,000 building expansion program for the district, Ireland said it is perfectly evident that three junior high schools ultimately will be needed in the district.

A $500,000 bond issue proposal for financing the expansion will be presented to voters June 14 at the regular school board election. Voters will be asked to approve the diversion of four mills now paying off a 1950 bond issue to the proposed issue.

Present expansion plans call for a second junior high school and an addition to the senior high school.

Ireland said the third junior high school will be needed by 1960 since enrollment figures based on promotion of children now enrolled indicate that by then total junior high enrollment will approximate 2,500 students.

"Since this figure does not include additional homes that will appear in our community, it is a conservative estimate," said Ireland.

"Any location of a second junior high school should be made with the third junior high school in mind."

"It would be reasonable to conclude that one should be located east of Woodward avenue, one in the central portion of the city (Barnum junior high school), and one on the western side of the city."

A careful study of sites indicates the fact that the triangle of ground bounded by Derby, Adams and the Grand Trunk railroad is the only site properly situated to serve the eastern portion of the district. It provides 22 acres which will be adequate in size for a junior high school with a capacity of 1,000 students," Ireland said.

A CONDEMNATION SUIT to acquire the Adams road site now is in the hands of the city circuit court awaiting hearing.

Eberle M. Smith Associates has been employed as architect to make preliminary drawings for a junior high school on this site. These drawings will be the basis for estimating costs which in turn will be basic to the final amount required on the bond issue," said Ireland.

Plans for the new addition to the present senior high school also were discussed by Ireland.

He pointed out that original planning on the high school allowed for future expansion to preserve the architectural beauty of the building.

"IN THE INNER COURT, between the library and science wing, a new wing can be built extending to the east and west, and joining the main structure at the northern part of the three story wing along Cranbrook."

"This addition will provide eight classrooms and a study hall by the end of the first semester of the 1954-55 school year."
