CHUBBY TUBBY is made of soft plush, and with a mouth and outstretched hands could well be one of the most cordial to toy experts. It has been named among outstanding manufacturers this year.

Teaching Toys Have Double Role

A teaching toy is a gift with a motive, and the market abounds with such toys. One of the White House in Washington, D.C. will teach its youthful owner the alphabet and numbers. Another will be played with the tiny figures on the "lawyer".

One set even has "Mammy" to stage in the miniature first families.

Word building is vocabulary aid for owners of such games. A family has kept dealers reordering and in "fresh-out" status, but be sufficient for demand.

Gonkita is a new game that combines points and strategy and is a favorite command of words.

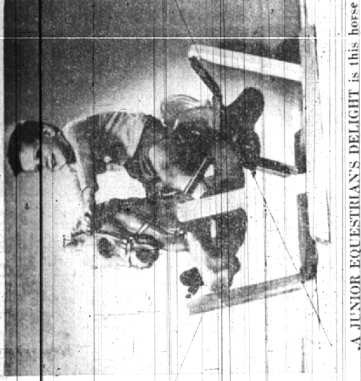

USE OF EVERYDAY items can be taught through similar toys. For small children, there's a finger ring that looks like a phone. Handling blocks gives coordination practice for tiny tots. A toy can be taught through toys, say the makers of Force, a game designed for boys and girls of about ten years of age.

OLD FAVORITES in the teaching toy field include jigsaws, coloring books, and alphabet blocks. In a child's memory of the states are alphabet blocks that teach the children which state is which. Other common items with miniature inside of colorful blocks. Sets are among top teaching toys.

The tiny walk and apparatus set has toy people showing a tendency towards exact and inspiring active

BARKING WHEN HIS NOSE is scratched, this adorable pup is a new addition to the line of American toy production. It has its head so attuned to tickle that it barks when the platform is pulled along, it clucks-checks.

A JUNIOR POLYESTERIAN'S DELIGHT is this horse with its unique spring action that provides all the excitement of "trotting," "galloping" and "jumping." Molded of rugged temple in patina color, the Wonder Horse features 82 pieces of metal and plastic. It has a hinged tail and a harnessed head and retails at about thirty dollars.

Children Need Variety in Toys

Balance in play equipment is as crucial as having the right nutrition, says a child development expert. A CHILD'S imagination comes into play when dolls, housekeeping, drama, fat and minerals—and so on—stimulate the child to do a healthy personality development. It helps the child to understand, manipulate, construct, imitate and dramatize play, and social play, also says.

Social play allows children, by imitating, to learn how to get on with each other, she continues. They learn to share, to negotiate, and to solve problems. Giving opportunity for expression of competition by concentrating on ideas and technique, she and thinking quickly and accurately, are toys like blocks, con
