

Scotch Sister Reunited With Brother

Here from Scotland to see her brother for the first time in 17 years, Mae McVean has been enthusiastic about what she sees of American life. Visiting her brother, Alex McVean and Mrs. McVean at their home, 1212 Webster, Miss McVean last week was a guest at the Order of Eastern Star installation meeting here. She commented that the drills "were much more beautiful" than in Scotland where she belongs to the Order.

THE REUNION INCLUDES also their brother, Bill McVean and his wife, with whom she came from Middletown, N.Y. They had entertained her in New York, and then came here on Oct. 16. The local McVean family feted their guests at a party October 23, and the Alexander Busby family entertained them all at their home on Woodward avenue on October 19.

Miss McVean comes from Shetleston, a part of Glasgow, Scotland, and will return home on Nov. 18 on the Queen Mary. She and Mr. and Mrs. Bill McVean leave for New York today.

GIRL SCOUTS IN TOO-LONG OR too-short uniforms are Mrs. John Adams' pet peeve, so this South of Birminghamer has begun a trading system. Her telephone-calls have already avoided several cases of little sister having to wear the far-too-big older sister's retired Girl Scout outfit. She is shown at her home, 4320 Hampton, with Brownie and Scout outfits belonging to her daughters, Marjorie, Karen, Charlene, and Suzanne, all scouting enthusiasts. (Eccentric Photo)

HOME TOWN

I journeyed to my home town
From the city where I dwell
And saw the old familiar scenes
That I remembered well.
I wandered up and down the streets
And those I met were strange,
Another generation lived
And I could see the change.
I passed the house where I was born
Its glamour too was gone,
The dear ones were no longer there,
They'd joined the Heavenly throng.
Then to the city of the dead
I strolled from stone to stone
That marked the long last resting place
Of many I had known.
I seemed a stranger in that town
That I had known so well
And then and there I was convinced
That home is where you dwell.

*The Lady says "Yes" ... Lebow Clothes

the big idea: naturally,

by Lebow

The back-to-natural movement in men's fashion is beautifully demonstrated in Lebow's Aristocrat. As in other Lebow ideas, the Aristocrat, with its narrower shoulders and straighter lines, keeps one eye on fashion, the other on comfort. The sum total is natural ease. Just how enjoyable this can be is readily demonstrated with a try-on. The current fall selections include Lebow's Carbon Glen, a worsted with remarkable press-retaining qualities; imported cashmeres with self-toned shadow stripes.
