SEPTEMBER

September walks the land again. The autumn days are here. The last of summer roses bloom And leaves are brown and sore.

It tucks the last of harvest in. Gives tang to fruit, full ripe. The air is filled with smoky haze As summer takes its flight.

September is a lovely time. It paints the landscape o'er Throws wide the gates of county fairs With produce rich, in store.

September rings the school house bell And learning now inspires. It's time to bring the pumpkins in And light the evening fires.
