Husband, Wife Do Paintings While Vacationing in Mexico

By DOROTHY JEAN ZACK

A wife who studies energetically at her art, and a husband who lets his engineering be his work while painting is his play, are moving from a modern home to a Norman style mansion in Bloomfield Hills.

Need for more space is taking the T. R. Kilgours from their slant-roofed, rich wood home that overlooks Quarton lake from Lakeside road. They'll be moving into the former Bramson home on Lone Pine road, with plans to be settled in September.

The Bramsons are moving to Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, after selling their home to the Kilgours and auctioning much of their antique furnishings.

MODERN STRAIGHT-LEGGED furniture will be moving into the home, after standing on the terracotta-colored, poured cement floor in the former home.

Warm tans and browns of the upholstery and the light wood will continue to be foils for the brilliant colors that the couple use in painting.

This summer's sketches that they did in the Yucatan peninsula are still being transferred into finished oils by the top.

KILGOUR'S VIEW of Lake Taxco, a Mexican scene sketched on a previous pleasure trip south of the border, is stylized and looks a bit like a circus. Small boats cross the lake, mountains are like a child-size foothills, and every thing has a whimsical tone.

Shapes and triangles of soft-toned color are Mrs. Kilgour's forte in paintings of the same lake. Since many of her paintings are award winners in Scarab club or Society of Women Painters exhibits, it might be observed that her style is of a current popular mode for judges.

While her sketches are realistic, of mountains in Mexico or of the hometown of her childhood, Eaton Rapids, her completed works are light struck lots of color that faintly glow with sunlight.

Before the couple moved to their specially-built home on Lakeside three years ago, they lived in Highland Park. Kilgour, born in London, England, came to this country during high school.

Mrs. Kilgour once taught at Detroit Institute of Arts and MacKenzie High school.

Teenage Couples Meet for Barbecue

Casual clothes were in order when 36 teenage couples gathered for a barbecue party at Dr. Foshew's home on Glengary Thursday night. Girls invited escorts for the party on the Foshew's patio.

Home from Mexico After Six-Week Stay

Richard Kropf, 666 Lakeside avenue, has returned from Mexico where he attended a six weeks summer session at Universidad Iberoamericana.

Among their decorative home items are ceramic bells brought from Santa Fe Art Institute and six Mexican handmade leather and wood chairs for their dining table. Both have had their paintings exhibited and many sold.
