BITS OF BIRMINGHAM

THINK IT was hot Tuesday? Well, most of us mortals sweltered along without outside assistance, but some people have to do things the hard way. At the office of a Birmingham real estate firm whose initials are SKB, things weren't quite right. Employees felt the heat was much more intense than it was Monday yet they were informed it was a few degrees cooler. They couldn't believe it as they wiped dripping brows. Finally it came out—a new heating system had been installed for that particular Woodward avenue building and was being tested to see if it worked. P. S. They tell this Wanderer it did.

JUST AS RAINDROPS started pelting onlookers of "The Golden Blackbird" (being staged in Cranbrook's Greek theatre and the audience started to "melt away" towards dry cars, shelter of trees and the St. Dunstan's playhouse), one cast member's line seemed to fit the time. "Oh, stay a while," she said with a restraining gesture, "I have another plan."

MOSTESS DUTIES in the rain were performed by Mrs. Donnell Matthews when she and other Kingswood Alumnae entertained garden club leaders at Cranbrook house last week. Mrs. Matthews ran umbrella trips to and from arriving cars in the courtyard, laughing as she told people that the damp couldn't take the curl from her new permanent. It didn't, but the event was attended by many with remarkably straight hair due to the down pour.

BIRMINGHAM'S City Hall may witness some internal changes in the not-too-distant future. Now that the Fire Dept, is about to vacate its old location in that building, the Commission is confronted with the need for making more space for offices for city employees. Mayor Renfrew said this week that the Commission is considering fixing up the Fire Dept, ground floor for a larger Commission meeting room, turning the present second floor area over to offices. When repairs are being made, Mr. Mayor, why not make those two large oak entrance doors to the Martin St, side of the City Hall look more beautiful?

A LOCAL MOTHER parked her car on Woodward early Monday morning, and discovered that the parking meter still registered over 20 minutes of available time. She smiled as her little son, awar of the situation, called out: "Gee, Mom, lant it nie to live where you don't always have to pay for parking".

Birth

is the former Betty Charlier of Birmingham. The maternal grand-parents are Mr. and Mrs. Felix Charlier of Washington street, Birmingham. The paternal grand-parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Henderson of Royal Oak.

TROUBLE'S BRUIN—Wynne Shearme, left, 23, and Marjorie Kennedy, 22, are afraid of a nuzzle from the muzzle of "Susie," the performing bear. Susie, like too many human motorists, does her hibernating at the wheel as she drives a bump-car at a London, Encland, amusement concession.
