
HALLOWEEN PREVUE. John Honkianen and Jeff Alborell had residents of Holland avenue, Birmingham, wondering the other day as they strolled about in this rig. Asked the why's and what's of the rig, the two said they were being "Monsters". Could be they're rehearsing for what will be common in October. (Eccentric Photo)

Argues For Moderate Auto Fines

To the Editor:

Why don't you solicit from your subscribers an opinion of what they think the speed limit should be on, say, ten of Birmingham's major streets. Woodward, Hunter, Adams, Lincoln, Maple, Oak, Cranbrook and any others you may think of.

We hear the average speed limit is much greater with present day cars than anything like 25 miles an hour and with safety too. Very few people drive with two wheel brake any more and require the 25 mile an hour speed limit.

* * *

If a good average speed was put up to the Police Department and the Council, we think this could be changed into a more reasonable speed limit.

After considerable needling, Mr. Moxley changed the speed limit on Fourteen Mile road on his side of the street to the same as Berkley on the south side and our progressive Sheriff always had 35 miles an hour on his side of the street when he was Police Commissioner.

We personally think what he is doing is building up a fund to hire more police, buy more cars and more Geiger counters to show the Council he is a self supporting department.

* * *

A BUCK a mile above 25 miles a dirty deal anyway you figure it and we don't think there is one person in a hundred in Birmingham who agree with it, therefore why should they put up with it when Mr. Moxley and his boys don't soundly themselves because we have nailed them over 45 miles an hour on Lincoln between Southfield and Woodward.

The enclosed copy of a letter sent to the Detroit Free Press in reply to their article on this same problem throughout the City.

Very truly yours,
DALE O. MILLER
