BITSTOF BIRMINGHAM

ROLAND JOINES of Birmingham, England, who visited is brother Frank Joines of South Millerway, Gilbert Lake, its summer, enjoyed The Birmingham Eccentrac so much iring his visit here, that this week he requested a subhere, that this week he requ arded to his home in England.

A CALER, who asked to remain anonymose, made an observation this week which while perhaps not original, fits the Chriman sensor for any other sensor for that matches the Chriman sensor for any other sensor for the most perhaps not time on their knees praying to food, there would be a least time spent on the couch talking to the pyschiatrist."

A CERTAIN HOME in Birmingham's northeast section possesses a dog. In cold weather, especially nights, this dog is kept in the garage, instead of his own doghouse. The other day the lady of the house put, the caine in the garage at mid-day, and then pinned a note on the front of the garage door that read like this "IEEE WEAR! DAWG INN SIDE." (Several youngsteen done neighborhood read the notice; although in early school grades, they exclaimed: "Them people can't spell very good, can they?" (The lady was merely joking... for prior to her marriage she was an English teacher in a Detroit high school.)

WE ASKED OUR CARTOONIST to give us a Christmas or paratition scene of the activity that is about to get under-vay in many Birmingham neighborhoods. He came up with he following, but he didn't tell us what neighborhood he used as a model. Perhaps that is as it should be . . . after all, his assignment was to be typical. See if you can recognize yourself or a neighbor in it:

where two small girls also were eyeing the merchandise. Reeves heard one of them say, "... but that will cost a dime more, and we don't have it, remember." Reeves politely offered a dime to take it, remember." Reeves politely offered a dime to the girls, who accepted it after some hesitation. "Several days later I was walking at the Maple-Woodward intersection when I was about to pass a woman and her little girl," related Reeves. The little girl stopped, pointed at me, and said to her mother, 'Monmie, I owe that man a dime—he gave it to me so I could buy some candy at the show the other night!" I had never expected to see the youngster again—but here she was. And she had her mother give me back the dime ... she wouldn't let me say no."

THINGS GOT MIXED UP bit in the new Birmingham phone book, now being delivered to customers. So Fire Chief Park Smith has enlisted the aid of this Wanderer. We both agreed it might be advisable if you clipped out the box at right and pasted it on Page One of your new phone ook where it says: "My FIRE Department Number". The box lists the business phones of the two fire stations while the phone book listing accidentally gives the municipal building switch-board, from which the call

SEVERAL HUNDRED LOCAL and nearby "addicts" of trout and salmon fishing were guests of Max Broock. Inc., local realtors, when Fred Pew and Ferd M. Broock showed them colored movies and stills of salmon fishing on the famous Mirammichi River, of New Brunswick. Pew narrated the picture, at the Community House the evening of Dec. 7. The fishing trip was made last September, and included in the party were Pew. Ned Jewett. Paul Cardell, Arthur Albright, Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Young and their sons, Jack and Paul Jr., of Detroit, Following the pictures, several men and women guests told of their fishing exploits. "And Fd like everybody to know that no one, at this affair, spoke anything but the absolute and complete truth about his fishing experiences and achievements," declared Fred Pew at the conclusion of the meeting.

IT APPEARS THAT Southfield firemen, at least at Station No. 1, could use the feminine touch in the kitchen. Cook First Class George Young (since demoted to second class) assisted by Matthew Mackenzie last week allowed their noon meal to bubble over the fryer, spilling grease over the counter and causing a dash for catch basins. Fire Capt, Joseph Desnoyers said the two have since been put in charge of keeping each other busy cleaning equipment.
