BITS OF BIRMINGHAM

GUARDS APLENTY at Forest Lake country club's tourney last weekend caused committee folk some embarrassment. Mrs. Robert Green, who with her husband loaned the club the use of a field between the club land and their Turtle Lake farms for parking, as well as donating the trophy, whipped around the lake to pick up her husband the first day. Stopped at the gate, she failed to prove her membership so turned back to her field to park and walk in. There, they charged her the 50 cent parking fee.

WE RECEIVED A NICE "thank you" note from Ross J. Warner, our local Davy Crockett historian, whose story and picture were featured in last week's Eccentric. Warner, 12, was outfitted with "Kentucky" rifle, powder horn and game bag from the extensive collection of Birmingham artist and sculptor Marshall Fredericks, who permitted use of his studio grounds at 4113 N. Woodward, Royal Oak, as background for the picture which The Eccentric used on its front page.

A DETROIT MOTORIST has an exaggerated idea of the cost of living in Birmingham. Last week Mrs. Catherine Klink wrote a $100 check for the Birmingham police department to cover a parking violation. It was not intentional, however. Mrs. Klink correctly wrote the figure "one" but slipped on the numerals, writing out "100 00 100". Parking fines are not that stiff," said Police Chief Ralph W. Moxley. (The check was returned to Mrs. Klink for correction.)
