ation for the event attended by 20 guests. Miss McWood, daughter of the Arthur B. McWood of Shallowbrook in Bloomfield township, will wed Dean Hopper of Pleasant Ridge early in September. Rites will be at St. Hugo of the Hills church.

THEN, IN MID-JULY, they'll be spending two weeks at Manhattan Island. Fishing will be the main activity, with Mrs. Pierce taking respite from summer cooking, since they will be living in the Long Bay lodge.

Friends and relatives of the M. B. Freemans will be having their first glimpse of the new Freeman home at 797 Coolidge Saturday night at a buffet dinner. The Freemans moved from 932 Birgeville May 15, and are busily planning remodeling of the home.

fall will be adding three rooms upstairs to the modern brick home. Mahogany furniture is being used throughout.

AMONG THEIR 44 dinner guests will be the Earl Kirbys of Metamora, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cuddie, Mr. and Mrs. John Mann, Mr. and Mrs. William McRae and Mr. and Mrs. James Hubbell. The Freemans have a daughter, Cheri Denise, 3.

Mrs. Earl Bartholomew of Yarmouth is spending the week with her daughter, son-in-law, the J. C. Malstroms, of Euclid, O., and their new son, Craig.

Going to Colorado last week were Dr. and Mrs. George Mallinson of Kalamazoo, according to word received by Mrs. G. Mallinson's parents, the Charles E. Bucks of Kalamazoo.

Mrs. Mallison, the former Jackie Buck, and her husband will spend several weeks at Gunnison, Colo. where he will teach a two-week workshop in science education at Western State college of Colorado. He is dean of the graduate school; ready has a room of the dining room begun, which will house his wife's china collection and in the

Interviewing Robots A Creepy Business

By ALICE E. MORGAN
It's weird enough to interview a robot, but when you talk to two of them at the same time it really does get creepy. Robots, you see, do not speak to each other. They convey their thoughts by a look, a gesture, or some mental power beyond the ken of mortals.

They talk quite freely with language, but their lack of expression, emotion, even awareness of things, is bewildering. I came from the factory to make them, but I'm not sure I can talk to them. They talked about their work, but I'm not sure I can talk to them. They talked about their work, but I'm not sure I can talk to them.

THE HUMANS' most sound signals of stop then at the work, for despite their complete human appearance, they are machines.

Most weird was the one called to be "opened up" to prove she was a machine, not another human. The comely young woman showed my concern, nor did the young man chosen to talk her to the dissecting room.

"They will blast her and blast her until she is reduced to atoms," he explained, without a single change of inflection. It was with no more feeling than we talk about junking an old car.

THE WHOLE story of the robots, far more complete than one can get through an interview, is depicted in the current production of St. Dunstan's Guild.

Having the "class" talked pointed out that the frailty of humans had created a concern about the weather. The show, set for this Friday and Saturday and the same days next week, will have an extra run June 19 should any performance be rained out.

"It's in the Greek theater at Cranbrook," Radium explained, "and out of doors, of course. Humans will not care to sit in the rain to hear our story. We are not concerned with weather."

AN HE SAID this, we could not help but wonder if he had detected a hint of pride in this machine-like product which should have no feeling of emotion.

Nancy Chesna's Truth Revealed

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Chesna, 647 Madison, announce the engagement of their daughter, Nancy Jeanne, to Harold J. Sherman, Jr. He is son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Sherman, Royal Oak.

The bride-elect attended Birmingham high school and is a senior at Wayne university's school of music of June 1954. She is now teaching music at Clara Barton Junior High School in Royal Oak.

Her fiancé, a graduate of Royal Oak High School is a senior at Wayne university and is employed at the main office of S. S. Kresge Company in Detroit.

The couple plan an August 5 wedding at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer.
