happens," Sullivan said, "but they don't find out much. They get evasive answers, grunts, or no answers at all. You ask 'What happened in school today?' and he answers, 'Nothing'."

"So parents learn not to ask direct questions, not to probe, but get their information round Robin's way."

The herd instinct is very strong during the years in "never-never" land, according to Sullivan. These teen-agers want to look the same, act the same and talk the same as the rest of their gang.

"The gang is more important to them than their parents. Parents should realize this fact, Sullivan said, and help the child play his role within his group."

REBELLION and hostility often is expressed by the adolescent, but according to Sullivan this is a normal situation.

"The teen-ager is trying to stand on his own feet and waste emanation from adults. Our adult opinions are being lashed down," Sullivan said, "because he wants to think for himself. He's got to feel independent, wants to show his dependence and we parents do not recognize what he is struggling for."

Conflicts often arise because parents are "old-fashioned," Sullivan told his audience.

"You think of him as if he were living in your home, in your day and you do not see him in his setting, at his level of maturity in his life."

WHEN CONFLICTS occur, let him "blow off steam" in the home, Sullivan advised. "Let him get it out of him, even if neighbors don't like to hear him. It's a good cathartic. He can't get it out of him at school, so parents have to stand it at home," he said.

Because a teen-ager is struggling with all kinds of problems and the blow can hear him, it's a good idea to avoid unimportant conflicts, Sullivan said.

"Really what difference does it make if he wears a dirty shirt to school? The time will come when he will want a clean one every day."

As a final word, Sullivan said parents talk too much at their teen-agers. They plan for them and not with them.

"When we talk, we must make clear exactly what we are trying to put across, what our values are and how these values operate. If we listen with some respect to our children's views, they will listen to ours," Sullivan concluded.

Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Dulles hope you will make public the details of the meetings between Stalin, F.D.R. and Churchill at Tehran, and between "Uncle Joe," Churchill and Harry S. Truman at Potsdam.

IN SO DOING, you will serve notice to the people that no future administration, including your own, again will get away with this kind of result that so harmfully was spewed in Yalta. In brief, no more "Secret" covenants, arrived at secretly.

Oxygen Deficiency Kills Jet Pilot, Autopsy Indicates

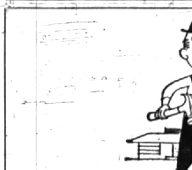

A report of an autopsy performed on Lt. John D. Anderson 25, of 789 Southfield, who died Feb. 19 during a training flight over Ohio, said "death was due to poor circulation, showing that his heart was not functioning properly at all times."

"It is altogether possible that high-altitude flying and the high speed of the plane, plus a slight leak in his oxygen mask, caused an overload on Lt. Anderson's heart," the report explained.

Major John A. Johnson, detachment commander of the 10th Fighter Squadron, Michigan Air National Guard, to which Lt. Anderson was attached, said checks at Wright-Patterson AFB showed there was a slight leak in Lt. Anderson's oxygen mask.

"THE REPORT" according to Johnson, indicated that there was a lack of oxygen to the brain and the entire body although there was a normal amount of oxygen in the lungs.

There also may have been an "Abletic" heart condition present since childhood, Johnson said, in quoting the autopsy report.

This and That

THE FREE western world would be stronger than it is. The Korean War never would have taken place, with its great toll of American lives. Nor would our own country be regarded to carry the burdensome taxes it now carries in order to be militarily strong.

If those Yalta agreements had been thus written, would any American President's release of her father's footsteps, Raymond, as village president when Huntington Woods became an incorporated city and had the distinction of serving as that community's first mayor.

EVERY SO OFTEN some act of exceptional honesty comes along and restores our faith in mankind—a faith dragged down each day by headlines and stories of treachery, savagery and outlawry. Such an act happened Monday when, shortly after noon, a young man came into our office to deposit seven cents in the coin box on our paper rack. He had been here Friday to buy a paper and after leaving the office discovered he had taken two of them. The return trip was to pay for the "extra".

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE to spend the greater part of 10 days enjoying Broadway plays... and have it considered work? That's what is going to happen April 1-10 to Robert Whitlatch, a sophomore at Denison University, Granville, Ohio. He is among the 31 Denison students leaving tonight for the New York theater trip for academic credit. Accompanied by Prof. and Mrs. Edward A. Wright, the group will see 10 Broadway productions and spring three other entertainments for the April 1-10 spring vacation period. Plays to be seen will be "The Boyfriend," "The Desperate Hours," "The Master Builder," "Silk Stockings," "Witness for the Prosecution," "Pajama Game," "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," "Bus Stop," "Anastasia" and "The Bad Seed."

IF SKUNKS spread their unpleasant aroma around your house now and then, a Birmingham woman has the answer to your problem. She has found that the beautiful but smelly creatures will have nothing to do with those cakes which, attached to garbage can covers, the cans, will keep hornets and wasps from nesting in eaves and under porches. They also seem to discourage sparrows from nesting around the home. She suggests fastening one to screen doors to repel flies and even putting one in attic and basement to rid the place of spiders.

NO HAPPINESS ABOUT the snow was the reaction when the John Parrotts of Washington boulevard and Mrs. Parrott's parents, the Walter Nobles of Bloomfield Hills, returned from Siesta Key, Sarasota, Fla. They had a cottage and apartment respectively and all had become boosters for the sunny days on Florida's west coast.

ANY WOMEN IN THE AREA who feel they are wizards at packing will have a chance to test their talent at the Community House on April 6, beginning at 9:30 a.m. Mrs. Howard Risman, in charge of volunteer workers for the 1955 Salk vaccine program, needs 100 pairs of helping hands for the job of packaging materials to be used in Oakland county schools. Persons are asked to contact her at her home if they can assist with the current project.

Southfield township Republican Women's club will meet April 7 at noon at the Community house for a salad luncheon. Members and visitors may reserve with Mrs. Marshall Chambers, of Birmingham. Betty Evers will talk on state legislation and taxes.

Mr. and Mrs. Armand Islette, Mr. and Mrs. U. E. Elok and Mrs. and Mrs. Howard Gould attended at ball spell at Sarnia last week for curling and a banquet.

Local women won the Hiram Walker trophy in Chatham and the Islette's son, Arnold, became junior champion in Detroit.

Women curlers are having an all-day meet in Windsor today to bring the season to a close.
