gathering that regardless of the toll road outcome, he planned on extending Northwestern highway on to US 24, which would head be expanded between Brighton and Saginaw.

Assuring those present that the highway department, which would like to put in a freeway along a similar route of the toll road, would not trespass through private or public property without first sitting down to talk over the proposed route with those involved.

"A CONTROLLED-access expressway with four-lane divided highway to facilitate traffic between Detroit and Bay City will be built," Ziegler told the audience.

"The choice is with the people as to whether it will be a toll road, built with benefits concentrated at a few widely separated access and exit points, or whether it will be a free expressway properly planned as part of the interstate highway system after full consideration has been given to all built-up communities and private interests adjacent to the route," said Ziegler.

NOTING that on July 1, the Federal government has provided that aid on interstate routes can be matched by 60 per cent Federal funds to 40 per cent state funds, Ziegler said that President Eisenhower's road program (if enacted) may change this to at least 75-25 matching basis.

"We believe that the legislature (state) in this session will recognize the necessity of increasing the amount of highway revenues which can be dedicated annually for bond issues," Ziegler added that President Eisenhower's road program (if enacted) may change this to at least 75-25 matching basis.

"I AM optimistic that the legislature will also pass a bill in this session for increased state funds for highway purposes," Ziegler, uncertain as to just when work could commence on any proposed freeway or on the extension of Northwestern highway, said, "There are many details of locations to be considered."

Schools

client use and improvement of playgrounds.

FINDINGS were that school buildings of older schools—particularly Adams, Pierce, Bloomfield Village and Franklin—require "extensive and important work to provide more play area and to relieve 'intolerable' mud conditions in playgrounds."

The committee also discovered an "alarming deficiency" in lighting in older schools. Whereas 300 foot-candles are required as a minimum school room standard, some classrooms rate as low as 100 foot-candles.

The survey also found that in older buildings classrooms are too small and buildings too noisy. Recommendations included elimination of partitions between classrooms and unused cloakrooms, use of modern movable desks and partitions, installation of sound-absorbing ceiling materials and removal of metal lockers whose slamming doors are noisy.

AS FOR THE swimming pools the committee's recommendations were based on overcrowding of the present single pool at Burnum Junior High and a new concept of community participation in school recreation facilities.

It found that the Burnum pool is booked to capacity—in and out of the school year—until 9 p. m. Students at Adams have been crowded out of the Burnum pool for the rest of this year and that a Red Cross life saving course would not be accommodated. These were only two of a long list of requests for use of the pool which had to be denied.

It found that a committee found, would provide a means—found in only limited quantity in this area—of family participation in recreation facilities. This was explained, would be a healthy factor toward preventing juvenile delinquency.

BOTH proposed pools would be available to the community on a "first come, first served" basis. The outdoor pool, would cost an estimated $350,000 and the other $225,000.

Under the committee's financing proposals, the entire construction program could be paid for without increase in the present tax rate for school debt service. This is because reserves on previous bond issues have accumulated to a point where recoverable millage will be available to apply on new bond issues.

The committee explains that its findings of "no tax rate increase" were only on the construction program, not to possible rises in property assessments or future school operating costs.

MEMBERS pointed out that the greatly increased enrollment in schools in the future, undoubtedly will mean higher operating costs anyway, regardless of whether new classrooms are built.

"The children are here and they're coming," one member said. "We must take care of them in any event."

Although the committee made no recommendations on the question of an auditorium for Birmingham High School, it urged the school board to make further study of the subject.
