

Finds Swimming Pool Odinance Had Almost Sunk

Birmingham Commissioner of Finance Willitt has swept aside the odds of time which could have engulfed her proposed swimming pool ordinance.

She told commissioners they apparently had referred her suggestions to a defunct or dormant building committee.

For several months now, she has been staging a one-woman battle to get some safety measures for backyard pools. The other commissioners, believing it undoubtedly an invasion of private property, have eyed her suggestion coolly.

"I checked and discovered we have no building code committee," she said.

OTHER commissioners carefully considered this new piece of legislation, decided perhaps the code committee now was the building code board of appeals—seeing it was composed of the same members.

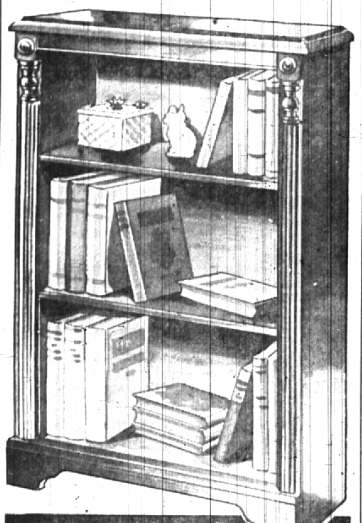

So commissioners completed the record, permitting the approval board officials to consider whether such safety measures as fences and shut-off valves should be required of persons who build backyard pools.

"Shucks!" erupted one commissioner after the meeting. "These we didn't get away with it!"

which was traveling at 55 miles per hour, according to Police Chief Harry Keweenaw. Archer was not in control of his southbound car.
