Doctor's Wife Is Doctor; Wins Award

Newcomer to the area and to a bride's housekeeping but no newcomer to the field of medicine is Mrs. Ruth Kraft, who on Sunday was named "Medical Woman of the Year" by the Blackwell branch of the American Women's Medical Association in Cincinnati, O.

Mrs. Kraft is the charming wife of Dr. Don F. Strohmeyer, and their home is on Hamilton road in Bloomfield Village.

Married last August, the couple have established themselves in a modern-interior new home complete with magnet-closing cupboard doors and remote-control light switches.

Practicing for 13 years in medicine, Dr. Kraft is a specialist with newborn or premature children, having pioneered in erythroblastosis fatalis, or exchange of blood in infants with blood of the RH negative type.

While studying for her BS degree at Michigan State university, Dr. Kraft worked on five jobs. She came from a German farm family in Fort Wayne, Ind., and worked and had fellowships to help herself through MSU and later Vanderbilt University School of Medicine and Ohio State university. She interned at Grace Hospital, did pediatric internship at the Yale University, New Haven hospital. Her pediatric residency was done at University of Pennsylvania hospital.

Now, HER WORK at Grace hospital, where she is chief of pediatrics, has been reduced slightly because of her householding allotments of her time.

Having lived in apartments until her marriage, which was first one for both she and her doctor husband, she finds cookery in a modern kitchen a challenge.
