How NOT To Visit A Sick Friend . . .

Bourbon toasts to the patient's recovery do little to help his case. Telling a sick friend all of your woes is no help toward recovery either. Hospitals have long known that no measure of solitary confinement correctly protects the sick in some instances.

Visitors can do a patient a world of good by following simple rules. Be certain that visitors are permitted. Don't bring food unless approved by the Doctor. Don't stay too long. With such care, visits to the sick are very helpful.
