Nuptial Gowns Reflecting New, Old Fashion Lines

A Family Tradition Continued by Bride

A few details about the wedding gowns worn by the bride and groom were revealed recently as they continued their honeymoon in Virginia. Mrs. Alice Cooper, the bride, was wearing a gown designed by her mother, Mrs. Alice Cooper. The gown was made of silk and featured a high neck and long sleeves. Mrs. Alice Cooper had designed the gown herself, and it was a perfect representation of her mother's style.

Classmate Designs Bridal Sheath Gown

An antique gold brooch given to her by her grandmother on the occasion of their tenth wedding anniversary became the focal point of the bride's outfit when she exchanged vows with her future husband. The brooch was passed down through generations and was a symbol of family tradition.

ENTERTAINERS at the Westlady were black partiers who actually planned their variety show because they were bored. They had a "command performance" for parents and neighbors Saturday.

An even more special moment occurred when Mrs. Alice Cooper walked down the aisle with her father, Mr. John Cooper. The father-daughter dance was a cherished tradition in their family.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Honeymoon in Virginia

Mr. and Mrs. John Cooper, the newlyweds, are spending their honeymoon in Virginia. They are enjoying the beautiful scenery and the rich history of the state.

Westlady Folks Get Acquainted

When neighbors see each other for the first time, they may feel a bit awkward. In the case of the Westlady Folks, however, they were more than happy to get acquainted. The families already lived in the vicinity, so there was little need for an introduction.

ENTERTAINERS at the Westlady were black partiers who actually planned their variety show because they were bored. They had a "command performance" for parents and neighbors Saturday.

Westlady Folks Get Acquainted

When neighbors see each other for the first time, they may feel a bit awkward. In the case of the Westlady Folks, however, they were more than happy to get acquainted. The families already lived in the vicinity, so there was little need for an introduction.

ENTERTAINERS at the Westlady were black partiers who actually planned their variety show because they were bored. They had a "command performance" for parents and neighbors Saturday.