Corkey the Monkey Takes a Holiday

BY DOROTHY ZATELL

LATHUILLIE—Monkeys may not be smarter than people, but often it is hard to prove.

That's the case of Corkey, the R. H. Anderson Indian rubber-tailed monkey. Corkey took to the trees over the Labor Day weekend.

When as a special treat he was teased and then placed in the highest branch of the tree, he took off at once for another monkey. This was the beginning of a series of monkey adventures.

For two nights Corkey was never seen, but the next morning on his usual tree-top perch, Corkey was discovered again.

However, for the next few days Corkey was never to be found in the tree-top perch. Now, according to Corkey, the monkeys are far too busy looking for food to think of him.

Perhaps Corkey and friends bought a complete set of Corkey's Adventures, the book that the monkeys are reading at present.

Other monkeys also have been known to buy the same.

Corkey is home now in a little cage and very much more of a Cokey Monkey than when he was free-range in the weekend before that.

GS Troop 499 Plans Weekend Camp-out

WEST BURLINGTON—An official announcement was made by Mrs. Harry J. Walsch that the troop will be en route on the journey of Sept. 30 at Camp Martin.

The boys will arrive late that evening and will continue on next day to Suches, Georgia.

These boys are a part of the 2,000 or so boys in the area who are working on the Civilian Conservation Corps.

We Heard It Said By:

Mrs. Mervin E. Mead, 2204 Southridge Drive, City of Pueblo, Colorado, was in town recently, spending time in that city's world-famous zoo, in a private party setting, and enjoying the exhibits of the world's largest zoo.

We'll have to hear from you soon, Mrs. Mead.

Mrs. Robert Wood, 411 N. Main Street, Pueblo, Colorado, is in town to visit with friends.

If we've heard it said, we'll pass it along.

RETURN FROM WEST

Mrs. David Weyman of Denver, Colorado, returned from an extended trip to the West coast. They had been to San Francisco, but they also visited several other places on the way to the West. They plan to return to Denver next month.

They had a wonderful time and are looking forward to their next trip.
