Water Shortage Not Due to Decreased Rainfall

Rumors about the water shortage are not justified. Despite the lack of rain, the water levels in the reservoirs are not unusually low. The Granny and Rainbow dams, for example, currently each contain 200 million gallons of water, more than enough to meet the needs of the community for several weeks. The situation is being closely monitored by the city's water department, which has implemented conservation measures to ensure a steady supply of water. The city is asking residents to conserve water by limiting outdoor watering and using water-efficient appliances.

Horse Sense and Nonsense

By Alice E. Morgan

Listening to the lusty billing of a bell on a recent gallery program, I came across a quotation from Cole Porter which sums up my feelings about the recent New York excursions.

"The dawn of '40s music is dawning. That's the way it is. It's right up there with the Hamburg school of painting. The '40s were the dawning of modernism. They were the dawning of the dawning of modernism."

Critic of jazz and the swing era, Cole Porter's vision was somewhat prophetic. His understanding of the musical currents of the time was uncanny, and he预见ed the cultural revolution that would occur in the following decades. The '40s did indeed mark a new era in American music, with jazz and swing bands taking the country by storm. Porter's words smack of the truth, and his perspective remains valid today. His quote serves as a reminder of how much the world has changed, and how much more change is yet to come.

Happening of Long Ago

Meet Your Michigan

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Wood, Jr., 203 E. Michigan Street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Betty A. Wood, to Mr. John W. Johnson, 124 W. Michigan Street. The couple will be married in Detroit on the 6th of this month.

From the Eccentric's Point of View...

It is a well-known fact that Michigan is a state of the United States with a rich history and a diverse culture. While the image of a rustic, lumberjack-filled state is certainly ingrained in the minds of many, there is much more to explore and discover in the Wolverine State. Whether you're interested in the state's natural beauty, its rich history, or its vibrant music scene, there's something for everyone to enjoy. So pack your bags and plan a trip to Michigan today! You won't be disappointed.