MR. PAUL MARTIN is Editor and Publisher of the 100-year-old State Journal, and past President of the Michigan State Association Press Association.

Here at THE STATE JOURNAL ... we are greatly pleased with BLUE CROSS · BLUE SHIELD

... says Paul Martin, Editor and Publisher, The State Journal, Lansing, Michigan

"And I am sure our employees are just as pleased with the way Blue Cross-Blue Shield protects them.

"Years ago it was something of a task to sell the hospital insurance program to an employee. The idea was new, and in many cases the restrictions were such that it was only natural for the individual to hesitate.

"That is all changed now, and the idea of hospital-medical coverage is generally accepted by folks in this organization. They want it, and are happy in it being made available at so moderate a cost.

"The protection given them and their dependents by Blue Cross-Blue Shield has afforded a feeling of security which they didn't have before. Such a feeling is conducive to happiness, thus greatly benefitting the relationship between them and management.

"One never knows when sickness or accident may strike. Blue Cross-Blue Shield recognizes just that, giving our employees that solid feeling of security for themselves and their families in an area about which they would otherwise feel quite insecure."
