At the Church Door

By JULIE CANDLER

It was a real Northwest specialty, and the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Emil Kontz enjoyed every minute of it when they attended a salmon bake one evening in Seattle recently. And who wouldn't enjoy it? Dr. Kontz says the huge salmon, freshly caught that morning, were halved and baked out-of-doors Indian style, on barbecue spits. Over 2600 people attended the event. There must have been a lot of salmon—and a lot of cooks. The salmonfest was part of the American Baptist convention's annual meeting, which the Kontzes attended.

After the guests had all the salmon they could eat, they watched American Indians provide the entertainment, which included war dances. Incidentally, Dr. Kontz says, they were Baptist Indians.

Speaking of travelers, the Rev. Dr. Harry O. Martin, associate minister at First Methodist church, added some new pictures to his beautiful collection of color slides recently on a visit to Boston. He and Mrs. Martin visited there after Mrs. Martin attended her class's reunion at Wellesley college.

Mrs. Ruth Mosher and husband, Karl, paid a visit to former First Methodist church treasurer Ernest Henshaw and his wife, who now live in Harworth, New Jersey. The church secretary and her husband were vacationing in New York City.

Mrs. Henry L. (Charlotte) Sellers, is back at the secretarial desk in First Methodist church's education department after the Sellers family's vacation trip to the upper peninsula and Canada.

Through the help of the Rev. Ralph Lee, of 938 Lakeside, Birmingham, a beautiful, originally styled brass cross and matching candlesticks now grace the altar at St. Andrew's mission of St. James Episcopal church.

Lee cast the slimly proportioned two-foot high cross and the matching square candlesticks in the workshop at home. He volunteered to cast the needed altar set designed by William Lewis in memory of his mother, Mrs. Robert C. Lewis.

Mr. Lee was formerly assistant minister at St. James church, and has conducted many services at the Berkley mission, whose vicar is the Rev. Herbert Barsale.
