

Only by holding the lamp of your love for another high, will its light lighten both the way and the load of that "another." Mutual affection requires constant nourishment; no starvation diet will keep it vitally alive... and if it does not thrive, it surely starves to death.

SECTION TWO

Touchees of Sentiment Prevailed— Sarah Colbert Wed to A. Grant Noble

Sentiment and tradition prevailed in the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony uniting in marriage Sarah Colbert and Addison Grant Noble, Jr.

A gold ring belonging to her paternal great-great-grandmother was slipped on her finger when vows were exchanged at Christ Church Cranbrook. Further sentiment was added by Sarah's maternal grandmother's earrings. Her engagement ring belonged to the bridegroom's great-grandmother.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester L. Colbert of Martell drive, Bloomfield Hills, the gracious brunet walked hand-in-hand down the aisle with her father to join the son of the Rev. and Mrs. A. Grant Noble of Williamstown, Mass.

ROWS OF shirred silk illusion fitted into a small cap with appliques of heirloom rosepointe lace from which fell a cathedral length veil of white silk illusion.

Sarah's gown of white Italian silk peau de soie had short shirred sleeves, and a square neckline with appliques of tiny seed pearls. Extending from the elongated fitted bodice was a floor length bouffant skirt shirred on the hips. She carried a semi-cascade of lily-of-the-valley and Eucharist lilies with ivy foliage.

DEEP PINK geranium and ice pink chiffon gowns were worn by the maid of honor and bridesmaids, Barbara Dodds, Frances Ryan Allen, Mary Lunn Bennett, Nancy Kay Carlisle, Helen Marshall Waterman, Cornelia Stetson Ward and Caroline Rush Noble.

Folds of ice pink chiffon draped into a square neckline of Barbara's geranium gown and the same color was repeated in the bustle bow and back panel falling to the hem of the skirt. She carried a tulpe basket filled with light pink demure roses.

THE MAIDS' gowns were of the same pattern with geranium pink accenting the ice pink chiffon. They carried tulpe baskets of sweetheart roses, pink geraniums and geranium leaves.

They wore small matching picture hats of pleated horsehair braid with sprays of lily-of-the-valley.

In a similar touch of white chiffon with contrasting touch of ice pink was junior bridesmaid Sara Belle Noble.

Jane Sawyer was flower girl. Her miniature hat and floor length dress was a repeat of the others in deep geranium. She carried rose petals.

JOHN Louis Van Zelm Sprague was best man. Seating the guests were John M. Hyde, Richard I. Johannesen, Jr., Rodman Ward, Jr., Lester L. Colbert, Jr., Nicholas A. Colbert, John Talbot, Jr., Henry M. B. Voorhis and George B. Ramsayer. Mrs. Colbert chose a Balenciaga sheath with fullness in the back and a hip length jacket in Carmine blue. Her small hat was of heaven blue trimmed with royal blue.

MRS. ADDISON GRANT NOBLE, JR.

Mother of the groom was in chard lake country club Sarah pale blue taffeta combined with blue net. Her matching blue hat was of crisscrossed velvet bands. Both mothers had delphiniums. They plan to live in Williams-town, Mass.

Hawaiian Theme Shower

A pink carnation lei flown from Hawaii was slipped over the head of Judy Stodart when she was the guest of honor at a bridal shower Thursday evening. Margaret Peterson and Gloria VanDerbosch, who are to be bridesmaids at Judy's Sept. 15 marriage to William E. Hogan, Jr., planned the party around a Hawaiian theme, reminiscent of the trip Gloria and Judy took to that island last summer.

Grass skirts, leis and ukuleles provided atmosphere at the Peterson home for the shower, attended by 16 of Judy's young friends. Orchids flown from Hawaii floated in the punch bowl and decorated the serving table.

Another recent fete for the bride-to-be, daughter of the R. Justin Stodarts of San Quentin drive, Lathrup Village, was the shower given by Mrs. Edward Neal and Mrs. Wayne Cooper of Detroit.

They used a yellow and white color scheme with bouquets of yellow gladioli and miniature yellow and white umbrella favors.

To Wed Lt. James R. Cavanaugh

Announcement of the engagement and approaching spring wedding of Carol Jane Cook and Lt. James Robert Cavanaugh was made at a cocktail party recently in the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Cook of River Forest, Ill.

Present for the occasion were James' parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Cavanaugh of Kirkway drive, Bloomfield Hills, the junior George A. Cavanaugh of Franklin Village and James' sister Gloria and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. William Guay of Blomfield Hills.

Carol is a student at Marquette university. Her fiancé is a graduate of Kiski Prep school, Saltsburg, Pa., and received his degree and a commission in the United States Marine Corps at Marquette in June.

This weekend, Carol and her parents will be visiting in the Cavanaugh home and their hosts have invited 60 friends to a cocktail party in their honor Sunday in Bloomfield Hills country club.

Fried Chicken and English Trifle

A Schooley-Estes family reunion was touched off by the arrival in town of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Stickey and family who are here for a vacation visit from California.

Scene of the Sunday afternoon party was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard P. Estes on Beach road. Mrs. Stickey and Mrs. Estes are sisters, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Schooley of Rivenook avenue, Birmingham, who were present for the event, as were Mrs. Schooley's sister, Miss Ellen Hiatt of Highland Park, and Mr. Schooley's brothers and their wives, the N. B. Schooleys and the C. O. Schooleys of Detroit.

Representing the Estes family were Howard's family, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Estes, also of Rivenook avenue.

Nine children completed the three-generation picture as the families enjoyed a fried chicken dinner topped off with ice cream for the youngsters and a surprise English Trifle for the adults.

For those of you with a sweet tooth, a recipe (not tested in The Eccentric's kitchen, but highly recommended by those who partook of it at the reunion) for English Trifle is herewith set down:

- Spread 6 lady fingers with strawberry jam. Line bottom of casserole dish 2 deep. Add a layer of coconut macaroons. Scatter grated lemon rind, then almonds. Pour over this 1/2 cup Sherry wine, then the hot custard. Let soak a few hours in refrigerator. Cover with whipped cream. Sprinkle with pistachios and candied cherries. Chill.
- 2 egg yolks
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- add 1 cup milk
- Cook 'til it coats a spoon

At 'Y' Conference

Attending the annual Y-Teen Leadership conference at Camp Cavell Aug. 26-31 will be Nancy Hammar, 21809 Kinsol, and Beverly Kochan, 22124, both of Southfield. The YWCA—An Ever Widening Circle will be the conference theme. Sessions will open Sunday morning with a talk on "A Look at the Map."

At the close of each day's sessions the girls will take a swim, enjoy recreational crafts, play tennis, softball and volleyball, and try their skill at archery.

Monogram News

Monograms are making a big comeback as a fashion-fad among college girls. Large-size initial letters are added to skirts, sweaters or jackets. To give the fad a practical twist, the girls use matching monograms to identify towels and other personal property.

Students Arrive Here From Overseas

brother and sister have a large noon meal together at home during the two-hour luncheon recess customary in Luxembourg.

HELY'S CHILDHOOD was like that of many European children her age, who grew up in wartime, with its accompanying poverty. One day during the years Luxembourg was occupied by the Germans, Hely's brother and grandfather were riding on a merry-go-round when the Gestapo came and snatched her grandfather off to prison. Two years later her father was imprisoned.

When American troops later entered Luxembourg and set the prisoners free, Hely's father and grandfather were among the few to go home to their families.

sadors will be attending Birmingham area schools as the first AFSS students there.

At Kingswood will be Maria Vonherstorff, of Germany, whose home will be with the Charles F. Moore, Jr., family on Lusher road in Bloomfield Hills. Maria joined the vacationing Moore family at Cape Cod.

Cranbrook school will be attended by Holm Sembach, also from Germany, who will be living with the Henry Fecheimers, of Argyle Crescent, Detroit.

Last year Birmingham high school had Margaret Davis, of New Zealand, and Eckhard Dorfmann, of Austria, as its first "AFSS'rs."

A meeting with the two court-ous, well-mannered young people who arrived in Birmingham Monday morning brings the conclusion that local students are lucky indeed to have these interesting young people as classmates.

Senior Girl and Boy from Luxembourg, Portugal

By JULIE CANDLER

There'll be two more good-will ambassadors from foreign lands studying as seniors at Birmingham high school this fall. The 17-year-olds from across the seas arrived here early Monday morning.

Helene Claudine Heldenstein of Luxembourg was met in Detroit at 6:30 a.m. by Charles N. Blunts, of 2380 Broadway boulevard, who will be her proxy parents for the next year.

Also at the station early Monday were the Elroy L. Sandbergs, of 959 Pleasant, who will be hosts to Tomas de Lima Branquinho da Fonseca, of Portugal.

BOTH HELY, AS she wants to be called in America, and Tom arrived in New York harbor Saturday, aboard a boat which carried 800 foreign exchange students. All will live with families throughout

LIVING IN NEUTRAL Portugal, young Tom escaped some of the more serious wartime hardships that beset Hely's family.

Tom is the son of the city of Cascais's art museum director, who is also a writer of some note. His attractive 19-year-old sister works for Trans World Airlines, and hopes to arrange a trip to America for herself while brother Tom is here.

His tall, slender brother likes sports, and has won several swimming trophies. His favorite game, he says, is soccer, and next come football, horseback riding, and sailing.

THIS ACTIVE young man also likes to dance. On top of that, he devotes long hours to study, as well.

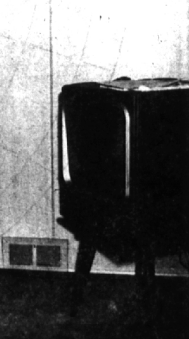

"He says he has had as little as two to three hours' sleep some nights when he stays up to study," said his Birmingham mother, Mrs. Sandberg. But with a laugh as he shake of his head, Tom modestly denies that he is an above average student.

TOM'S FIRST ACTION after getting acquainted with his new family was to take a shopping trip to downtown Birmingham. After lunch, his all-time favorite, he had much for him, and Tom observed the worldwide custom of catching up on lost sleep with an afternoon nap.
