College Bound Plan Footwear Wardrobes Before Taking Off

Smart answers to the inevitable tests to which feet, as well as heads will be subjected, on the campus this fall, will be found in planning the shoe wardrobe at home before taking off for college. This year's campus footwear tests involve not only normal thriftiness and choice of shoes to wear well, but fashion rightness as well because of the pronounced trend toward better grooming from tip to toe.

For Eds and Co-eds alike, thriftiness in footwear, as well as fashion rightness depends on selecting shoes that permit a frequent change for the right occasion. At least two pairs for dress or party wear, two for casual and classroom wear, and one pair of comfortable slippers, constitute a minimum. More are recommended if the budget permits.

Chinos Rate For Classroom Wear

Directly in line with the "dress up" trend which is sweeping all age groups from the early grade through college, is the growing popularity of trim looking cotton Chino (khaki) slacks which are rapidly supplanting blue jeans as classroom and campus attire. Chinos are easy to keep spotlessly clean and neatly pressed.

Blue jeans, while bowing out of the classroom picture, will continue to function usefully as practical togs for hard work and rough-and-tumble play.

It's been a long time since kids were just kids. Now they are teenagers, post-teenagers, sub-teenagers and — latest of the categories — "teen-agers," meaning a girl between 11 and 16.

Just to make it all more complicated, the days when you could tell them apart by the things they wore have gone forever. Now they are all dressing up. It began with the teenagers. Now, believe it or not, the tweens have thrown away their dirty saddle oxfords and blue jeans and they, too, have become little women.

A recent survey reveals that the average girl between 11 and 16 will start the new school term with seven pairs of leather shoes in her wardrobe.

THEY WILL include two pairs for dress-up and five for casual and sport's wear. Simple leather flats will predominate in the casual category, varied with a slip-on moccasin and a low-cut two- or three-eyelet oxford type shoe with a saddle-like trim and tailored leather sole.

A wardrobe of flats would probably include one in black calf or kid, one in brown glove leather and a more sophisticated version in the off-white to beige scale — probably in suede leather.

The tweener's dress-up shoes will probably include opera pumps cut quite low in the continental manner, in black, navy, brown or cherry red smooth leather; one in black suede and one for ultra occasions. The smooth pumps will probably be trimmed with perforated designs.

New Favorite is Toggle Coat

For outdoor wear, the toggle coat, styled after the Austrian Loden coat, raises the voice for most likely to succeed for high school girls. It's finger tip length comes in a variety of colors and fabrics, and teams ideally with separates for schoolwear.

Usually there's a detachable hood that adds a touch of glamour as well as protection for the ears. For cold winter days, your full length coat will follow the slim look with back or side belts controlling the sweep. The most fun for fall is the spirit of Tyrol that has invaded the fashion world. Prints in bright reds, yellows, blues and greens are delightfully charming and seem to reflect the happy, carefree life of their country origin. They are festooned with garlands of delicate flowers, hearts, and gaily dressed boys and girls. Look for dresses quilted skirts, blouses and jumpers in the Tyrolean mood.
