

Many tools of learning that children need should and can be acquired before teacher points out their value. If there isn't a good dictionary in the home of the school child, there should be. A good encyclopedia is a "learning tool" that will serve for years. With education at all levels taking children's minds around the world during class room instruction, every school child's home should have an atlas and if possible a globe.

Teen Ager's Use Duffle Bag As School Time Accessory

Today's teen agers are getting an extra-curricular course in how to live out of a duffle bag and like it a lot. Lad or lass, they all carry their duffle bags.

It's a fad, yes, but what a practical one! And it isn't just a passing fancy. High schoolers first began to discover the advantages of accessory luggage a year or so ago, and this year finds the "luggage for school" fad in full force.

The duffle bag is a favorite for sturdiness and almost unlimited carrying capacity. It holds everything from books to gym togs, and if an after-school picnic or hamburger fry is scheduled, food supplies may be in the bag, too.

When the girls get together for a slumber party or the boys schedule a football practice session, a duffle bag is equally useful for overnight supplies or athletic equipment.

In addition to school needs, teen agers find these handy bags ideal for travel, and they're now more "travel-conscious than ever."

And parents approve the duffle bag fad because it encourages the youngsters to keep track of, and take good care of, all their possessions.

Small Caps to Top Off School Attire

Caps are due for high favor on the college and high school campus this fall, with grade schoolers quick, as usual, to follow the lead of their older brothers.

Triggering the resurgence of the cap for casual wear are the new styles which are small-shaped, small-peaked and close-fitting, usually with a strap in back. These "ivy league" type caps will be worn with everything from "like" jackets and sweaters to suburban coats and other finger-tip length outerwear.

A handsome innovation in the fall sweaters for young men are those in a bulky knit, having the appearance of sweaters, handknit of large yarns. Much use is made of bold Scandinavian patterns.

CAP'S THE CLIMAX of the new "neater" look on the high school and college campus, this fall. Shown here, a blazer-striped corduroy.

A HIGH SCHOOL girl's best friend is her duffle bag. She uses it as luggage for overnight visits to friends, and to carry athletic equipment and books.

School Neatness Includes Shoes

Acceleration of the dress up trend among school children brings welcome attention to the care they give their shoes. The old saw says a gentleman is a man who keeps his heels polished.

Uppers also need care. Youngsters should be encouraged to polish them often with a good paste or cream wax. This keeps leather pliant and supple. Making it a practice never to wear the same pair two days in succession will lengthen shoe life and also keep them looking better longer.
