Father looked hard at his wife and then at his son.
"That boy has taken money from my pocket!" he stormed.

"Ernest," she protested, "How can you say that? Why, I might have done it."
Father shook his head. "No, you didn't; there was some left."

ROBIN Kirkpatrick and John Wakeman examine a sponge from their Pierce school science class' undersea life diorama. This is one of the exhibits prepared for the school's open house.

Pierce PTA's Open House

Pierce school's PTA has scheduled their open house at mid-year this time, rather than during national education week, as in previous years. This way, teachers and pupils have had a greater opportunity to prepare exhibits and projects, demonstrating their objectives and growth to the parents.

Tonight, at 8 o'clock, the school will be open for parents to visit. A great many art and craft lessons at various grade levels have been related to the science and social studies work.

This enables youngsters to "see" these things with their creative results, as well as through the written words in their textbooks. Each teacher will have an opportunity at the open house to interpret these murals, replicas, etc., in terms of the overall objectives for that grade.

son for the Morrises to travel to southern Florida. Once there, however, they decided to make a real midwinter vacation of it, flying to Havana, Cuba for a few days.

While in the southlands, Mr. and Mrs. Morris will likely be doing some riding, since both are ardent equestrians. They own their own jumpers and hunters and frequently participate in fox hunts sponsored by the Bloomfield Open Hunt club, of which they are members.
