Silver Dollar Swim Accents Dad-Lad Party

Scores of sons from Birmingham and Bloomfield went with their dads to the Detroit Athletic Club's annual Father and Son party last Saturday afternoon. There were little boys and big boys, young dads and older dads and many grandfathers in the 700 ranging from seven years to seventy-odd.

Featured all the way were prideful smiles. Attire was the nattiest. All came early, converging first in the club's natatorium for an hour of aquatic events. Dads took to the balcony—there were great splashes to evade.

YOUNGER lads swam in contests. They dove for the silver dollars thrown in the pool—and to the fastest went the most. There was an exhibition by Bruce Harlan, diving champ and coach at University of Michigan, and other stars. A comedy team performed antics from the high board to treble laughter and shouts. Luncheon feasting was to lively music by the Leo Reisman Orchestra. Five hundred were at long tables in the gymnasium. The other 200 lunched in the Pontchartrain room, then came to the gym balcony for entertainment by ventriloquist Jay Nemeth, comic Roger Ray and singer Mary Meade French. Members of the D.C. Beavers group ushered and distributed the gift pen and pencil sets.

JERVIS C. Webb, and his sons, Jervis H. and Chris, were there—

Mr. Webb has attended each year since he was a small boy. Edward W. McCall, his son Bruce, and George H. Webb were together.

John S. Bugas brought seven-year-old Jr. Peter J. Monaghan and Michael were there, as were William C. Newberg and young Robert Charles E. Diehl.

Robert Stuart Fife was with his dad, Robert E. Fife, and his grandfather, D. Lytle Fife. Rudrick R. Otto, his sons Rudrick G. and Walter E. Otto II and the senior Walter E. Otto were another three-generation group, as were Albert G. Reed, M. A. Reed and Robert.

WITH Robert Vanderkloot were sons Bill and Jimmie. Frank Palmer brought his sons, Richard and Neal, and his grandson, Kenneth. It was seven-year-old Kenneth's first dad-lad party. F. E. Diefendorf and Ned were together, and William F. Fitch, Jr. with William F. III.

Norman J. Fredericks brought sons Bill and Dick. With Clyde P. Craine, Jr. were Clyde III and Michael, and with Judge W. Beardsden were Dan and Tim. A foursome were John T. Annas and John, Jr. with Philip J. Monaghan and Phil, Jr.

A proud dad was Granville A. Morse, surrounded by six sons including Tony, Mike, Jim, Dick, Pete and Tom. With them were Mr. Morse's nephew, John Peabody and his dad, H. Ellwood Peabody.

THE LIST continues with J. S. Beechler and John; A. Frye Ayers, Ronald and Richard; William A. Reid and Bill; Thomas J. Bolton and Christopher; William M. Bullock and Bill; Charles W. Duffy and Chuck; Gene A. White and Stuart; William D. Downey with William K. and Gary; Edward F. Berry with Pat and David; William J. Cleary with Bill and Mark.

More and more—there were Les-

To the men who protect your tomorrows

This week the Life Agency Managers Association of Detroit is honoring the men listed on the left as the Outstanding Life Insurance Men for 1955. Each has been chosen by his agency as "Man of the Year." These men were selected for this honor because of their contribution to agency morale, their loyalty to company and agency, and for their able and conscientious services rendered to the community and their policyholders.

The recommendations these men make affect the future of many people. Our own officers observe every day the important part played by Life Insurance in the life of our community.

Thanks to life insurance underwriters, substantial estates have been accumulated even in this day of high taxes and high living costs. We have seen these funds protect many a family's future by safeguarding the home, business interests . . . and the welfare of widows and children.

The Detroit Wabeek Bank and Trust Company pays tribute to these "Men of the Year" Life Underwriters for their distinguished contributions to their clients and community.

We are honored that many of them have used our Trust Department services to help them in their estate planning programs.
