

New B'ham Directory Is Ready

DON LARGE

Choral Clinic Guest Conductor Is Don Large

"Not all of the talented young vocalists can go to Interlochen," says Choral Director Clarence Luchtman of Bloomfield Hills high school.

Consequently, Luchtman is directing a choral clinic at the high school through July 20, with WJLB Choral Director Don Large as guest conductor.

Southeast Area Residents Form New Association

Plans for action are being mapped by a new association of residents of the area north of Fourteen Mile road and east of Woodward as far as Eton Park.

Problems which the group named the Southeast Birmingham association, has given priority for action include the widening of Eton road south, low-flying planes over the area, and use of residential streets and E. Lincoln by commercial vehicles.

Robert Flavin, 1742 Mansfield, was named president of the new association, a successor to the Sheffield Estates taxpayers' association. Walter Wilcox, 1700 Melton, is secretary-treasurer.

A committee will present proposals and a social activities chairman and assign block captains to enlist memberships. A general association meeting will be held later at Tolly school.

One of the easiest ways to know this community from A to Z (that is, from A.A. Cab Co. to Stanley P. Zwolinski) is to study the new Birmingham City Directory.

The "scapular" records of all adult citizens, firms and institutions are contained in the city directory and in no other place, the publishers, R. L. Polk & Co., state with pardonable pride.

The 1966 guidebook, now being delivered to subscribers and ready for reference use, lists 19,384 personal and business names in Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills and vicinity, with 18 the minimum listing size.

THIS REPRESENTS an increase of 3,049 names over the 1964 edition according to the publisher's records.

Abbreviations at the ends of the addresses show the community in which each address is located, and a map shows the exact area covered.

Included are designations of overextended and rented homes, marital status, wives' names, homes and places of business having telephones, and a story of Birmingham, with several pictures.

THE COMMUNITY now has 300 distinct lines of enterprise, the publishers found. These groups are catalogued in classified (yellow) pages from "abstractors" to "yarns." Classifications run from "baby sitters" and "television" to "dry goods" and "piano tuners."

Birmingham takes no "back seat" when it comes to interesting surnames. She has a Sly, a Fly, and a Rock and Roll.

The directory shows "who's who, what, where and how." The latest issue of the book is distributed to branches of the free television library system operated country-wide by the members of the association of North American Directory Publishers.

A local unit of this out-of-town directory service is located at the Polk Directory building, 431 Howard St., Detroit, where a collection of current directories of cities throughout the United States and Canada is provided for the free reference use of the Detroit metropolitan area public.

Given Scholarship

Brownson Murray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Murray of Kenwick, Bloomfield Hills, was jointly awarded, along with Lewis A. Engman, of Grand Rapids, the Sims senior honor scholarship in economics for 1966-67 at the University of Michigan.
