Second in a Series
At the club house of the North Hills golf course, head pro, Leo Conroy made a remark that will win agreement from many golfers who have played the 6,412-yard layout. He declared in all seriousness, "there is no easy hole on this course."

Further questioning of the humorous pro brought out the fact that there were two holes which he would rate as really tough—the fourth and the ninth. For the average golfer he gave the nod to number nine as being the hole to break the linkster's back.

CONROY OFFERED these reasons. "The 391-yard hole has a number of hills to hinder your drive from hop-back rolls to little knolls to deep hollows. It takes a good poke by most men to clear the first rise which is about 210-yds. from the tee."

"Once you're over that, the ball drops into a hollow either laying uphill or down hill. This position presents difficulty to a player with limited strokes. From this hollow your second shot is made blind—can't see the pin."

"ON THIS SECOND SHOT, a good golfer will use his wedge or a 9-iron but if the ball is not a dead drop on the green it can tamble off down the hill on all sides." "The green itself encourages club breaking reactions because it slopes at a 20-degree angle with large assortment of rolls and dips. Conroy quipped, that this green has more rolls than a baker has."
