

Fellow Voter:

I am familiar with our District's need for schools, good roads, drains, and an adequate water supply—we all are. Solutions are varied and for the purpose of a political campaign I will not pretend that they are simple. I have met with many of our local authorities in order to ascertain those steps which will most effectively aid in their solution. With team work and steady pressure they can be solved. This I hope to aid in doing.

"YOU CAN'T BEAT THE BEST"

Poems from the Pen OF GWENN R. USHER Bloomfield Hills

POTPOURRI

The sweet, the pure
She will endure.
The gay, the lark
She makes her mark.
The loud, the hiss
She thinks her dash.
The wise, the glad
She shuns—too bad!

While out walking
She is talking
I'm not list'ning,
Snow is glist'ning.
Wonder fills me,
Nature thrills me.
Wrapped attention
Needs no mention.

To be truthful
In word spoken,
To be shunned
receives as token.
To be silent
thus confirming
To be gully lies affirming.

Now the fruit of the tree
if here within reach,
Mister worm I find
in the prettiest peach.
There must be a moral herewith to reap;
It could be that beauty
is only skin-deep.

The prude may seem shrewd to the blind,
But the truth, forsooth,
He is bitter, unkind,
The meek may seem weak in defeat,
But he bears the part
Where hatred has no heat.
The sage, without age, is most blest:
He knows, as he sows,
That seeds of love are best.

THE SIMPLE TRUTH

Well-meaning heart that reaches arms
To share the warmth it feels,
You have been criticized by those
Who joy from life would steal.
Well-meaning heart, whose only hope
Is gladness to beget,
Be not afraid, they fall so hard
Who cannot see their feet.

THE ART OF GIVING

To a stranger give welcome to enter
Your heart, where there's love and the fire
Of hospitality burning.
Give hope to the lonely, inspire
A soul who is sadly yearning
For friendship, the clasp of a hand;
Give of yourself, for this token
Is something good folks understand.

To a stranger give faith when misgiving
Has planted the seed of despair;
Confidence seek to be winning,
Where lack of it cannot compare
With the truth, unadorned spirit
Of friendliness blessed with a smile;
Give with your heart, not lip-service,
And life will be truly worthwhile.

OUR DESTINY

"Look to the skies!" the old man said,
"Though bleak or fair, small wonder,
There's something left man cannot claim
He invented. By thunder,
What is symbolic of our times
Leaves little doubt that science
Will one day tell us 'God is myth!'
What of our souls' reliance?
"What of incentive to be good?
What of our Heaven-to-be?
These are the things I think of most
With each new discovery.
Granted our lives are now prolonged,
Beyond life's expectancy,
What good to live deprived of hope
That God rules our destiny?
"Man cannot live on bread alone,
Inspired though he may be,
Inclined to worship feeds his soul,
And faith gives him right to see
All that, in life, he long for most;
His greatest necessity—
Belief that, in death, God is Host
To all who live righteously."

SNAP JUDGMENT

Reading broadens the horizon—
Helps one see another's view.
All too often we rely on
Our opinion, as our due,
In passing judgment when the need
Reflects that we are losing
On a weather-beaten reed;
And from bias should be weaning.
While absorbing and retaining,
We might learn to hesitate;
Thus snap judgment of restraining
If, at first, we'd meditate.

SUSTENANCE

Heaven's wonder!
Hear the thunder!
Lightning roars the darkest sea;
Give to singing
All that's bringing
Hope where sorrow used to be.
Friendship strengthens
And God lengthens
Life for those whom we need so;
Faith is magic
When the tragic
Seems to bend our spirits low.
Look to Springtime,
Let your heart rhyme
With God's purpose be in tune;
Hope is master
When disaster
Falls to hide the sun at noon.
Courage lending,
Feelings mending
Through the hours when needed most;
Love beside us
And, to guide us,
God our understanding Host.
