

To Re-Examine Need for Bus Regulations

Charging that it was morally unfair to permit competitors to operate without city regulations, John Manikoff, representing two Birmingham taxicab companies, obtained city commission reexamination of a proposed city bus ordinance.

MANIKOFF'S primary argument centered on the bus company's numerous operational changes, which he claimed were a disservice to customers who are accustomed to think of buses as providing steady, constant and dependable service.

Injury Accidents Soaring Locally

"It's one of the worst months we have ever experienced accident-wise," said Birmingham Police Chief Ralph W. Moxley in referring to the previous month in auto accidents.
