Visit Primitive Islanders On South American Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fishman, Orinocco circle and 12-year-old daughter Susan have returned from a six weeks trip to South America by air.

Their first stop was Panama where they spent a week and then on to Lima, Peru for a four-day visit. From here they went to Caracas, an exceptionally lovely resort spot, they report, spending a week at a hotel adjacent to the grounds surrounding the home of Peru's President.

At their next stop, Santiago, Chile, they remained a few days before flying over the mountains to Mendoza, Argentina, the heart of South America's vineyards. Here they remained 10 days, enjoying the beautiful rolling countryside of the most extensive in the world.

First stop on their return flight was again Panama where, incidentally they had left their winter clothes. An unforgettable experience was in stores for Susan and her dad here. Susan had heard about very primitive people living on the island of San Blas, just off Panama and was anxious to visit the site.

They learned the boats were not running so could only get there by plane. This turned out to be a boarded and took off which they landed and they landed and assumed they were there.

However, the pilot led them to a very crude craft made of a hollowed-out tree trunk and bearing a fragmentary sail, motioned for them to board and their son found themselves with some three miles of Atlantic ocean to cover in this rolling, tossing shell.

On the island, Susan and Mr. Fishman were fascinated by these very primitive inhabitants with half naked bodies, rings in their noses and lips and dark skins. They seemingly occupied themselves with shredding coconuts and hollowing out the canoe-type boats from logs.

Reluctant to have their pictures taken, they were finally bribed with trinkets and coins. Their dwellings were small thatched huts.

In New York the Fishmans were met by their married son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Fishman of Detroit and together spent three days before returning home.

ROXY'S BIRTHDAY

Possibly the most descriptive definition of an individual is a child who prefers a big red tomato to a birthday cake.

Such a gal is Roxie Derge who, last year, had just that—a huge red tomato with a candle in the middle. This year at her party Sunday found Roxie had graduated from a mere tomato to a tossed salad for cake.

To celebrate her ninth birthday, Roxie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Derge, Monday way made her own invitations to a "dangaree party." Cutting up an old pair of jeans, she made small bags and tied them onto a tinker-toy stick with red-checked gingham. Inside the bags, she slipped the slip of paper on which appeared the invitation. She called these invitations "Bum-bags."

Guests enjoyed a Sunday afternoon dinner, roasting hot dogs and marshmallows in the nearby fire ring fireplace and sharing the birthday tossed salad. A treasure hunt, games and contests completed the afternoon's fun.

Guests were Barbara Wall, Jane Van Halteran, Glotches Twintmeyer, Susan Rumsey, Carol Sarnes, Nancy Dunham, Kathleen Liffey, Joyce Gettelman, Sandra Hickson and Joan Carter.

Merritt Hitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wright Hitt, Valley Forge, entertained five friends and his brother Jeffrey at birthday lunch and movie celebrating his eighth birthday. Table appointments were in keeping with St. Patrick's Day.

Taking home turtles as souvenirs from a real fun party were Stanley Carter, Bobby Reynolds, Tobey Nicholson, Bobby Phelps, Walley Stecker.

They left Chicago at 10:15 a.m. on Friday, circled Detroit hopefully but went on to Buffalo. Leaving Buffalo at 2:30 p.m., they returned only to circle the Motor City skies again where the combination of traffic and the storm forced them on to Cleveland.
