BHS Groups Will Travel To 'Careers Unlimited'

Tentative plans have been made to transport 365 Birmingham high school seniors and 500 ninth graders in busedons to view the Detroit exhibition, "Careers Unlimited."

Parents of high school students are also urged to visit the third annual exhibition of job opportunities planned for March 12 through March 23 in the University of Detroit Memorial building.

"We feel the visit to the exhibition is valuable to the students," said Birmingham School Superintendent Dwight B. Ireland when queried on the project's merits.

"Many students are unable to decide on a course of study because they don't know what jobs will be open to them when they complete their schooling."

"The exhibition gives them a clearer picture of training needed to fill jobs in the Detroit metropolitan area," Ireland said. "The exhibit of job opportunities is sponsored by public and par-

Monday, March 12; Wednesday, March 14; and Thursday, March 22, from 8 to 10 p.m. Admission is free.

Earl Redell, general chairman of "Careers Unlimited" and vocational director of Detroit public schools, said, "Whether your son or daughter plans to continue on to college or go to work directly from high school, Careers Unlimited has a definite value."

"An early insight into factors needed to be a success on the job should be common knowledge to everyone," he continued, "especially to young people about to start out."

"By attending this exhibit and reviewing jobs available in this area, parents can help their children make the right choices," Redell added.

Set Poetry Program

Mayme English Liotti will present a program of James Whitcomb Riley's poems for the students at Bloomfield Village school tomorrow.

Primary grades will hear Mrs. Liotti in the morning, and in the afternoon the older grades will hear her program.

BHS Speech Students Speak to Groups At Community House

During the recent Community House roll call drive, speech students of the Birmingham high school under the direction of Angelo Angelecci, speech teacher, addressed organizations in the Birmingham area meeting in the Community house.

Pointing out the advantages of a community house and its need for funds were Robert Andrews, Patricia Hendricks, Sally Hanson, Sharon Byers and Steven Weiner.

Spanish Club To Learn Dance Steps Of Latin America

Spanish club students will enjoy a Latin American dance demonstration Tuesday night at 7:30 in Birmingham high school cafeteria.

Included by the Arthur Murray studio will be the mambo, samba, rumba and tango. Demonstrators will instruct Spanish club members in steps they wish to learn.

Sharon Grey is program chairman and Sylvia Kordenbrock and Lynda Corkery are in charge of refreshments.

THE STRANGE OBJECT through which Stephanie Kimbrough, Bloomfield Hills high school student, is peering, is a Keystone telebinocular. The stereoscopic eye test is here being administered by Guy Mulholland, safety director, Michigan trucking association (left) Felix Wotla, BHHS driver training instructor, and Chris Newman look on. The telebinocular was one of seven tests participated in by 150 of the high school's students, recently in the trucking association's statewide program to help teenage drivers through discovering any weaknesses in such important driver abilities as visual acuity, color discrimination, reaction time, and distance judgment.

Assembly Explains Benefits Derived From AFS Program

The campaign to bring two foreign students to Birmingham high can field service program, the assembly next year is now fully under way, with an assembly last week explaining the project. The students told their experiences while away from home and explained how they have benefited from the AFS program.

The school is required to pay $550 per student for accident and illness insurance, the money being supplied from contributors from students, teachers and interest clubs.

Four students from Birmingham high school have applied to the AFS to go abroad this summer. Final selection will be made later.
