Industrial development men agree that most industries considering location in a town carefully examine the community's "climate for industry." This climate is demonstrated by the town's eagerness for industry, the fairness of its zoning and tax laws, and the presence of such attractions as industrial development corporations and industrial districts.

P.K.
 His father was a minister Who lived a Holy life. The son was just a normal boy Whose pleasures were finite.
 He tried to do his very best, But often was misjudged. When he appeared with something new, He sometimes was misjudged.
 So he was often out of bounds, He didn't mean to skid. But he was tired of hearing this, "He is the preacher's kid."
