Ascension Festival To Be Observed At Lutheran Church

Two special observances are planned for this week at Lutheran church of the Ascension. The church will observe the festival of Ascension with a special service beginning at 8 p.m. this evening, to commemorate Christ's ascension into heaven to be crowned as King. The service will possess a coronation air, as each Christian assembled will crown Christ as his King by submitting his life to Christ's rule. Sunday, May 13, will be observed as "family dedication Sunday." Church school pupils have invited their parents to accompany them to worship services which will be centered around the theme of the Christian home.

Lecturer Views Public Health And Religion

Practical application of scientific Christianity is making a vital contribution to public health and well-being, said Dr. Archibald Carey of Detroit, in a lecture here last week. A member of the Christian Science board of lecturership, Dr. Carey spoke in First Church of Christ, Scientist.

Speaking on the subject, "Christian Science: How God Heals," Dr. Carey said that if every individual could be taught to maintain his own individual immunity to disease, public health problems would be solved.
