Your Garden Should Have A Prominent Location

The well-kept rose garden is so lovely that it should occupy a prominent location on the property where it will be most convenient and at the same time give the most pleasure to the whole family.

Some home owners prefer to spread single rose bushes around the property for colorful effect where color is needed either in a foreground planting, or for accent in general. Whichever you do, locate the plants where they will catch the eye.

If you prefer, your rose garden may consist of a number of groups of three or more floribunda or grandiflora roses planted with other shrubs.

If you like flowers in the home and practically everyone does, rose plants or a rose garden supplying differently colored blooms is an excellent investment.

They will give better growth and more flowers that are more perfect. A good rose plant will return several times or more its initial cost in beautiful cut roses for the home the very first year.

If you prefer roses in the home and practically everyone does, rose plants or a rose garden supplying differently colored blooms is an excellent investment.

Flower-Bordered Drive Is Pleasing

Many driveways could be made much more delightful by the simple expedient of a few perennials or shrubs as a border.

Visitors get their first impression of a home as they come up the driveway, whether a long drive or a short one, and as for the home owner himself, it puts him in a good humor after a day's work to see the borders of his drive in full bloom.

There are two solutions in achieving the effect desired, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

THE FIRST is to make two long narrow beds and plant permanent shrubs, both evergreen and flowering.

Florida roses make a splendid border for a drive as do numerous other flowering shrubs, such as azaleas, spirea, forsythia, or anyone of probably a hundred or more shrubs that do well in your neighborhood climate.

Consult with your nurseryman and try to obtain a succession of bloom so that one plant or another will be in bloom at practically all times from spring through summer.

ANOTHER solution to making the drive more attractive is to plant the beds with perennials. Thus you can have the early-flowering perennials followed by those that flower in the summer, such as delphiniums and phlox, followed by the ever-popular fall chrysanthemums.

Other perennials can be mingled with them, such as daylilies, to give pleasing effect, while evergreens can supply winter color.

Many home drives can be made far more attractive at very small cost. And it pays off as the lovely plants put both visiting friends and family in a happier frame of mind as they enter the drive.

Fifteen Class A railroads serve almost every locality in Michigan, carrying raw materials to plants and taking finished products to consumers.

Lumber Yard Is Plywood Showcase

It is logical and easy to decide to use decorative plywood for home improvement. It is also easy to decide which kind of plywood to use.

The most convenient place to see the many varieties of plywood is the local lumber dealer. The local dealer is wide awake to the trend toward increased use of decorative plywood, and he will have many helpful displays and samples.

Perhaps he will have the standing display with which he can demonstrate in three minutes flat, the easy steps for putting up panels. He may also have counter displays and large, standing units which show the most popular species of plywood, both finished and unfinished.
