

NOW ON VIEW AT Cranbrook Institute of Science, this exhibit of the skulls of Michigan mammals, birds and the feet of birds, shows adaptational modification. Additions to the new collection are welcomed at Cranbrook Institute of Science, where they will be passed on to the Cranbrook school as a permanent reference for biology classes.

Rural Families Being Absorbed by Suburbia

Suburbia is swallowing up Illinois and Michigan rural families at the rate of 15,150 a month, according to figures released by Robert R. Justus, Chicago regional director of the post office department. Post offices in the two states, excluding the upper peninsula of Michigan, served 181,814 fewer families on rural routes at the beginning of 1957 than they did a year previous, postal records show.

PHONIA AMMONIA

Ammonia should not be used for home rug care. The use of ammonia may permanently injure rugs and carpets or furniture coverings. Soaps containing alkalis are not recommended either.

JUSTUS explained that city delivery service was granted to approximately 207,061 additional families, about 720,000 persons in Illinois and Southern Michigan in the past 12 months. At the present time 4,000,047 families in the Chicago region are served by city carrier service, which is less than a fifth of the two-state population, 729,000 families, are on rural routes.

Another factor that sheds some light on suburban growth is the great increase of business places in Illinois and Michigan in 1956. At year's end there were 18,830 more business establishments in the area, according to Director Justus, than at the start.

MOST OF these are in the vast suburban areas around Chicago and Detroit, where counting in manufacturing concerns have moved from metropolitan centers, gathering about them new homes and small businesses. At present there are approximately 328,350 business firms being served by the post office.

Justus' report revealed the immensity of the postal operation in Illinois and Michigan. Total receipts for the region's 2,164 post offices last year were $321,051,000, an increase of 5.6 per cent over 1955.

The 16,691,800 people in the two-state area are served by approximately 55,000 postal employees.
