"I LIKE LOTS of table room to spread out books and papers I'm working with," says the Rev. Barton Lloyd, pictured at work on a sermon in his "hide-out." There he is surrounded by his books, Japanese art objects that are souvenirs of childhood days when his father was an Episcopal missionary in the Far East.

How He Writes His Sermons:

Rev. Lloyd Studies, Writes in 'Hide-Out'

By JULIE CANDLER

Did you ever wish you could have a secluded spot all your own, where there was no telephone, no noise, no interruptions? Rev. Barton Lloyd has just such a spot.

That's where he goes to write the sermons he delivers as minister at Christ church (Branford) to its Evergreen and North Adams Episcopal missions.

The tall thin minister calls his special place his "hide-out." He's wisely keeping its location a secret. He goes there early Sunday mornings, reviews his sermons for about two hours before going on to Eastover school in Bloomfield Hills.

THERE, BEGINNING Sunday, he will conduct services at 10:30 a.m. instead of 10, so there will be time to conduct an 11:15 a.m. service at Beverly school for the new group known as the Evergreen mission.

Sunday marks the first service at Beverly school for the Evergreen group, which saves the general area from the West Beverly to Franklin.

Helping the two young congregations organize has kept the young minister busy since his arrival in the Birmingham area last summer.

Busy or not, he still spends an hour or more at sermon preparation and study each morning in his hide-out.

"IF I TRY TO work here," he explained as we talked in his big, paneled study at Christ church, "I accomplish little. The phone rings, people drop in. Besides, I have difficulty getting my mind off the administrative details. I handle living," he says, "I see no point in it."

To connect it with reality, Mr. Lloyd feels "you have to know people, the problems they face."

"A SERMON CAN BE much more helpful if it has back of it some understanding of people in their work," he explained.

He believes ministers should visit men at work.

"If your sermons have no connection with the work at which men spend most of their waking hours, often they don't come to church. And if they don't come, the minister has even less chance to understand their problems, at work or otherwise."

CALLING ON MEN at work, he says, "When he preaches, I finish it Saturday morning, then I say it again. If I study it Saturday night I won't be able to go to sleep."

When he preaches, he says, "I do with a smile, is a wonderful preach both sermons from the same manuscript, but it turns out slightly different each time."

By Thursday he's ready to write
