W. Blm. Players Rehearse Comedy

WEST BLOOMFIELD—Township Players of West Bloomfield have been already into rehearsal two weeks on their upcoming "so-phisticated" comedy, "Wake Up, Darling."

The play, by Alex Gottlieb, will be presented in October at the West Bloomfield school auditorium. No specific dates have been set.

First presented in New York City last year, it starred such personalities as Barbara Britton, Barry Nelson, and Russell Nye.

Newness of the play and the fact that it has never been produced in the Detroit area will aid Township Players on "Wake Up, Darling." One of the Players' objectives is to produce plays which have not been locally before.

The play centers around a play-boy playwright, Bedford Prescott, who is a play for a play, a frustrated advertising man. Polly is only interested in getting the lead role, but her husband, who hates advertising and aspires to become a successful playwright, becomes more frustrated with the situation. The play resolves itself in the end, but not before a policeman's.
