Bachelor Is Groom

"It helps to talk to horses when you are caring for them," says Everett Larkin, confirmed bachelor and groom at Bloomfield Open Hunt. Horses are like any pet—they sense when you are afraid of them, and when you love them.

He's a 'Big Man' Around The Stables

Everett Larkin is only five feet tall, but he's a "Big Man" around the stables at the Bloomfield Open Hunt Club. The Irish, blue-eyed, 130 pound groom is 78 years old, and has worked with horses since he was a small lad on a farm in Belleville, N. Y.

Larkin feeds and grooms about 65 horses a day at the Bloomfield Open Hunt club (in the winter, about 90.) His day normally starts at 4 a.m. and is over about 7 p.m.

A CONFIRMED bachelor, "Larkey" has been at the BOH stables for 15 years. He feeds the horses three times a day, and swears they know the hand that feeds them. When he opens the stable door in the wee early morning hours, there is a general chorus of neighing and snorts, and a row of noses line up for a touch from his hand.

Everett has his favorites. "Chester" owned by Doctor Furlong of Pontiac is the largest horse in the stable. The horse weighs more than 1200 pounds and stands 17.2 hands. To clean him, Everett stands on a water pail. "Korzie Boy" a 5-year old chestnut gelding owned by Harold J. Havenrinale of Birmingham, nibbles at Everett's cheek while he is cleaning him. The little groom says all the horses have personalities just like people do.

* * *

IT HELPS to talk to horses when you are caring for them, Larkin says. Horses are like any pet—they sense when you are afraid of them, and when you love them.

Once when he was a young man working for a construction company, Everett had to decide whether to save his horses or himself. His team was in danger of being pushed down a sixty foot embankment by a runaway wagon. Larkin lost his wagon and its load, but saved his horses by staying with the horses and unloosing their martingales. He escaped with a few bruises.

The clean, well-groomed horses speak well for the stablemen's care at the Bloomfield Open Hunt Club.

Plaques Honor Birmingham Police

Michigan State Police Sgt. Michael Sibal (right) of the Redford post presents Birmingham Mayor William E. Roberts (center) with a plaque from the National Safety Council awarded the local police department for its maintenance of accident records in 1956. Police Chief Ralph W. Moxley (left) holds a second plaque awarded for Birmingham's fatality-free record in 1956. A third plaque, for outstanding police traffic supervision, was received earlier this year. The presentations were made Tuesday afternoon at a meeting at which the department's annual inventory of traffic safety activities, was analyzed by the safety council. Sgt. Sibal reviewed the analysis.

Mothers Hail Schools' Call

To the Editor:

Would it not be a nice gesture to invite all the mothers who did survive the summer, to stand up and allow themselves to be counted?

Let no one fret about tiny old crow feet which might have crept in to make themselves at home around the eyes. Let no one worry about the corners of the mouth. The minute our scrubbed Cherubs scramble aboard the eight o'clock bus, next week, the corners will turn up again in a smile, the crow feet will evaporate and the droopy shoulders will straighten. Parents will become whole again.

Blessed be school. Blessed be the teachers, and every single book and worn desk. If this combination fails to create geniuses out of our children, we shall not complain. They should be rewarded for attempting the task. It's not that the weeks dragged; I only did.

* * *

IN THE LAST few days all pretense of being sweet, kindly, understanding, and settling arguments in a calm soothing manner vanished before the noon hour was reached. "Everyone will just have to go home and mine will have to come in the house, sit on chairs, and I shall take an aspirin, go lay down for a few minutes, until sanity returns to this premise," was the bald statement given many times recently. (In June, whenever a quarrel erupted in the backyard, the procedure was to draw everyone in a cozy circle and 'talk things over like they do in the United Nations way'.)

Like chimes they are. These September school bells. Ring on and on. They're music, sweet music to all mothers' ears.
