

SOUTHFIELD HI NOTES

Discussing taxes and the Internal Revenue department recently, a government class was quite surprised at the amount of money that each individual has to pay in income taxes. Gary Evans concluded that someday we'd be "taking home our tax and collecting our withholding money!"

Last week 3,000 spectators watched the big game between the Detroit Lions and the Southfield high faculty, preceded by a game between Southfield police and firemen versus the Southfield high men varsity basketball team. Strange as it may seem, the Lions left the field of battle limping, with a score of 47 points to the faculty's 54. The varsity team won with the score 44 to 41. The two games were sponsored by the Varsity club, and all proceeds will go toward a whirlpool bath for the training room.

Bruce Osgood knows that sinking feeling. It was only the other day when he unthinkingly locked his car keys in his car—with the motor running.

Darlene Keranen relates her never-to-be-forgotten car mishap. It happened one morning last week when she drove her dad to the bus at 5:30 a.m. Dressed in pajamas and a winter coat, hair in curlers and barely awake, she gracefully slid into the ditch on the way home. There was a lot of explaining to do when she walked to the nearest gas station with her request for a tow truck.

Have you ever wondered what some of the students do the last night of exam week? Some of the activities of these worn-out students were: Judith Marshall went to Northland and had a hot fudge cream puff. Bob Carlson dropped his transmission. Betty Mc Mahon played all of her Elvis Presley records. Bill Mikulas ended his week with revenge—he burned his English grammar book! (At least he said he did.)

Some of us were wondering why some of the boys were wearing such unusual hats in the school. Then we found that Nanci Frederick and Elaine Parker, working on the school newspaper staff, were running a contest to find the most atrocious hats. The fellows got their pictures taken wearing their hats and will be seen in the next issue of the Southfield Jay.

Someone came up recently with a very fitting definition of the word "quicksilver." It simply means, "The way your allowance goes."

Underclassmen received their picture package this week, and have been exchanging photos with friends. As he viewed the print for the first time, one student who was rather disappointed, shrugged and commented, "I'll agree that cameras don't lie, but I've changed a lot since last December."

A math student cunningly referred to his report card situation as:
 X equals me
 Y equals my mark
 X plus E equals no car.

Boat Trip On

That off-again on-again Southfield senior trip is on again. With 130 signed up for the trip, the seniors will leave Detroit May 10 for a trip by boat through the Soo locks, a stop at Mackinac Island, and return on May 22.

Look for Theme

The junior class from committee Mike Larson, Dana Douglas, Judy Bryson, Sharon Bradley, Beverly Kochan, Arlene Mikovitz and Judy LaRue have come up with three workable ideas for a prom theme. Based around Fred Netting's or chesta, they must select a language: Teahouse, Caribbean or Hawaiian or Parisian Cafe theme this week.

Officials at Meets

Following the latest developments in educational planning, Glenn Schoenhaus is in Atlantic City this week attending the national superintendent's and business administration meeting. Martin Van Anoye is off to Washington to attend a meeting of the national secondary school principals.

Apply Early

Students who attend schools where driver training courses are not offered, are being urged to get their applications in early for summer classes at Southfield high school.

Plan Talent Show

Sponsored by the Student Council, talent try-outs were held this week. Talent scouts Elaine Parker and Ed Kennedy will organize a program to be presented at a school assembly and select 15 minutes of entertainment to travel to Berkeley and Farmington high schools during April.

BARNUM JUNIOR HIGH NEWS

Author at BHS
 Birmingham high school students heard an account of six warfairs in the Middle East at an assembly Friday. Speaker was Dan Tyler Moore, of Cleveland, O., author, lecturer, and former chief of counter-intelligence in the Middle East.

The speaker, participating in the opera. And I've had much more fun creating my own tales and charts, and I'm sure rather than trying to copy a picture of a Scottish community from an encyclopedia.

In an old Scottish pub, instead of murky kettles, wooden tables and chairs, a single structure of four metal rods and colored thread will be used to simulate the bar.

All proceeds, from the two performances will go to the foreign student fund to bring a European student to Cranbrook or Kingswood next year.

Use Contemporary Scenery, Props For 'Brigadoon'

CRANBROOK — Theater group who attend the coming Kingwood drama production "Brigadoon" will find the material set in the 18th century in the Scottish highlands. All scenery and props are designed with contemporary American in mind.

The entire stage will have the look of a non-objective painting when the curtain rises in Cranbrook's auditorium on the evening of May 14 and 15. Even the familiar chair will give way to the "cave-in" chair.

John C. O'Brien, head of Cranbrook's art department, and "We chose a light, airy motif so the students could move the props with ease and will have more stage space to be mounted all PUPILS GATHER around to watch their teacher, Miss Alfreda Purchase, open gifts they presented her in a surprise Valentine party last Thursday. Refusing assistance from mothers, the enterprising Pierce school fourth graders planned and staged the party, collected money and purchased a leather purse and box of candy for their teacher. Another teacher asked Miss Purchase to visit her room. Chief planners were Patricia Pearson, Andrea Hall, Richard Skatt, Mary McHugh, and Kay Bartholomew.
