Village Players to Present 3 Performances of "Anastasia"

Only two things necessary to the production of "Anastasia" by the Village Players remain to be completed this week. But both are vital because on this show, opening Jan. 25, the Players are staking their reputation as one of the foremost community theaters in Michigan.

Two other amateur organizations are staging the same difficult production this month in Oak Park and Wyandotte. Then, in March, another community theater will present the same show in Grosse Pointe.

APTITUDE TESTS

enable you to learn the kind of work YOU can best succeed in, or the kind of studies YOU should follow. (For men and women, boys and girls.) Vocational Counseling Institute Daniel L. Beck, Director 958 Macomber Bldg., Temple - 1151 Woodward near Warren 11 Years Serving Detroit

Those are the reasons why the Village Players have combed their membership for talent and have opened up the treasury to put their best foot forward in the "Anastasia" competition. So, this week costumes for the cast will be shipped in from Brooks, the New York experts who outfit 90 per cent of the Broadway shows, and Mrs. Paul N. Averill, president of Birmingham Society of Women Painters and also a Player, will do in water color the poster that marks a dramatic moment in the Russian riddle: Did one daughter of the Tsar escape execution?

"ANASTASIA" first was presented at the Lyceum Theater, New York, in December, 1954, with Vivien Lindfors in the title role.

The Players will present it at their Chestnut street playhouse on Jan. 25, 26 and 27. Curtain time is 9 p.m., except the Sunday performance, which is at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at Grinnell's in Birmingham, or by writing Mrs. Marcus W. Arthur, 16061 Dunblane.

DIRECTING A SCENE from "Anastasia," Dr. Jack Hassberger rests on the edge of the stage as he talks to Mrs. Arthur Geming (left) portraying the empress, and Mrs. Richard T. Cloonan, who plays the role of Anastasia. Dr. Hassberger and other members of the Village Players of Birmingham are readying the production for its opening next weekend.
